

Carter: Tax rebate, spending possible

Plains, Ga. (AP) — President-elect Jimmy Carter said Monday that tax rebates and increased government spending may be needed to spur the nation's economy, and he discounted the likelihood of wage and price controls.

Carter said at a news conference that he believes that unemployment can be reduced to between 4% and 4.5% over a long period of time, which he said would be equivalent to 3% of all adults over 20 in the jobless ranks. He said this would take two to four years.

Currently unemployment is 7.9%.

The President-elect also repeated his belief that inflation can be held down by targeting federal programs to areas of highest unemployment rather than through uniform national program.

Carter said he cannot at this point be specific on details of his plans to decrease unemployment or the possibility that he might call for a general tax reduction or one-time tax rebate.

But he said that his possibilities for increasing the money supply include "tax rebates and spending."

Carter held his second news conference since his election in the auditorium of an agricultural experiment station here and announced he will fly to Washington next week to meet with Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur Burns and some of President Ford's Cabinet members, possibly including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Carter announced also that Jody Powell, his press secretary as governor of Georgia and during his presidential campaign, will be White House press secretary as well.

In a three-minute statement preceding the question-and-answer period Carter said his selection of Cabinet members and other top government officials will be slow, careful, cautious and deliberate and that he personally will interview top contenders for each choice.

He said those who are not selected for Cabinet rank may well be in-line for other top government positions including ambassadorships abroad.

"I have not made a decision up to this point on any one of the appointments," Carter said.

He noted that he plans a meeting soon with leading members of Congress and business and labor leaders in which he expects to discuss jobs and taxes among other subjects.

Federal Reserve Chairman Burns has said he does not intend to resign his key monetary post and Carter said he believes he will be able to work harmoniously with Burns.

But he also said that he intends to seek a relaxed monetary policy.

He said he sees no incompatibility between goals of lowering unemployment and inflation while "pursuing aggressively the promises I have made to the American people."

He mentioned most prominently welfare and tax reform and the institution of a comprehensive health care program for all Americans.

In response to a question, the President-elect said that only some sort of economic disaster would prompt him to call for wage and price controls.

As he has previously, Carter made clear that since he is not yet President he cannot speak for the United States government or influence its decisions or activities.

He stressed this particularly when asked about the possibility of forming his own negotiating team in renewed SALT talks with the Soviet Union or in making any moves on his own to try to head off price increases by the world's oil-producing nations.

Having said that he cannot have any official role in trying to influence decisions by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) until he is inaugurated Jan. 20, Carter said he does hope the OPEC nations will not increase oil prices.

He said it would be far better for the economy of the world for the developing nations and for the OPEC nations themselves "if they exercise great restraint."

He said again that the Soviet Union is the key to reduction of atomic weaponry in the world and said he is encouraged by the contents of a recent speech by Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and a statement submitted to the United Nations by Soviet Foreign Secretary Andrei Gromyko.

It was noted that the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty agreement with the Soviet Union expires next year and Carter said that while he criticized the Ford administration during the campaign for lack of progress he sees no productive reason to do so now.

He said he obviously has no objection to the talks continuing in the period before he takes office. And he said that as president he hopes to pursue negotiations that would achieve his goals of freezing missiles and warheads and effectiveness of nuclear weapons at their present levels.

"If we cannot get a new agreement I would be very likely to ask for an extension of the present agreement," Carter said.

Police review unit satisfying to nobody

By Gordon Winters
Star Staff Writer

Current procedures of the Police Review Board received almost universal damnation in a City Council hearing Monday on a proposal to abolish the board.

But those who supported creation of the board slightly more than a year ago told the council they still support the concept of a civilian body empowered to investigate citizen complaints against the police.

Jack Siegman, chairman of the review board, urged the council not to destroy the body on the basis of one experience.

Siegman said the board was working with untried procedures when it held its first public hearing on a complaint by a youth that he was treated roughly by an officer.

The board knew that some changes in its procedures were inevitable and members are currently working on corrections, Siegman said.

He said he supports a proposal by Sue Bailey that would change procedures to keep the identities of the complainant and the officers involved secret during early stages of the review board's investigation.

The proposal to abolish the board came from Councilmen Bob Sikya and Max Denney, who claim that civilians have sufficient recourse against police misconduct through conventional means without a review board.

The pair point to the police internal investigation office, the court system and the mayor's office as avenues for a citizen to lodge a complaint.

Denney, who originally supported creation of the review board, said Monday he has changed his mind because the procedures didn't work out. "Both parties were unhappy with what happened," he said of the board's first hearing.

Denney also said the thought details of the case that were printed in the newspaper were "abominable." The alleged misconduct, of which the officer was exonerated, occurred after the officer saw a dog attempting to have intercourse with a clothed youth who was on his hands and knees.

Police Officer Jim Hill of the Lincoln Police Union told the council he was "amazed and appalled at the fiasco that was described as a police review board hearing."

But board member Ed Wimes told the Council that abolishing the review board would be "ridiculous." "Anytime you have positions of authority there should be checks," he said. "Richard Nixon had a position of authority and he finally had to be checked."

Councilman John Robinson, who spearheaded creation of the board, accused Denney of planting the seeds of destruction in the board during its creation by refusing to agree to certain measures, such as allowing the complainant to have an attorney.

"I've known all along you didn't support the concept and would use some phony kind of excuse to try to kill the thing," Robinson said.

After intervening comments, Denney responded, "I don't like to be called a liar by you or anyone else."

Police Chief George Hansen told the council just the title, "Police Review Board," had a negative impact, but he felt some review process could be created that would not result in publicity and hard feeling.

"It doesn't do any good when both parties walk out feeling so badly they can't work together in the future," he said.

The council apparently will not vote on the two review board proposals until Dec. 6. Mrs. Bailey's proposal will receive a public hearing next week, and the public hearing on the proposed abolishment also will be continued next week to allow Mayor Helen Bosalis, who is in the Soviet Union, to speak to the council.

The council's Nov. 29 meeting has been canceled because members will be out of town.

Separatists win in Quebec

Montreal (AP) — The Parti Quebecois, which wants independence for Quebec and its French-speaking majority, upset the Liberal government of Premier Robert Bourassa in elections Monday.

The separatist party had only six seats in the last legislature, but shortly after voting ended, the party had won 52 of the 110 seats and was leading for 19 others. It has promised a referendum to determine if Quebec should remain part of Canada.

Postal Service registers surplus, first since 1972

Washington (AP) — The U.S. Postal Service turned in a $15 million surplus between July and September, a performance officials said may forestall a rate increase that had been expected next year.

Postmaster General Benjamin F. Bailar called the surplus "a very sharp improvement in our financial picture."

The announcement came as a surprise because of the string of deficits in every quarter since 1972. At one time, the Postal Service projected a deficit of $425 million for the latest quarter. Only last month, it announced a record $1.2 billion deficit for the fiscal year ending last June 30.

"We're not out of the woods yet," Bailar said Monday. "Nevertheless, this is a major accomplishment."

Bailar indicated the financial improvement may result in a delay in the next request for higher postal rates. Originally, he had felt that an increase in rates probably would be needed next year, he said.

Now, Bailar told a press conference, "I'm hopeful there will not be a rate increase in 1977."

He said the improvement was accomplished mainly by reductions in a number of postal workers through attrition. The workforce has shrunk by more than 50,000 jobs since January, 1975, and now stands at 664,000, Bailar said.

"We have gradually reduced the number of people on the payroll. It's been in every craft, in every department at every level."

"We are going to keep on trying to reduce our manpower where we can do so without any dropoff in service," the postmaster general pledged.

Another factor in the surplus was a continued small increase in mail volume during the quarter, Bailar said, noting that postal officials had anticipated a decline.

Bailar said it would be difficult to maintain the break-even operation because of future salary increases, built into the labor agreement with the postal unions.

But he expressed hope that the $1 billion deficit, which previously was predicted for the current fiscal year, can be cut in half.

"I don't want to leave the impression that the postal problem is over," he said. "But during this quarter we have made a lot of headway."

Lots of living went between visits

By Jim Camden
Star staff writer

Forty-four years is a long time. Hope DeLancey, of 2733 Starr, and her sister Dicy Hert of Vallejo, Calif., know because that's how long it had been since they had seen or heard from each other.

Mrs. Hert, now 63, last saw her sister in 1932 in Emporia, Kan. Since that time, she has lived in Washington and California, been married and divorced, had three children and six grandchildren and retired.

Hope, a girl of 10 at their last meeting, has also married, had six children and eleven grandchildren. She has always lived in Lincoln and is a nurse's aide.

The two were among the 10 children of Charles and Gertrude Phelps who lived near Colorado Springs, Colo. Two months after Hope was born, their father had a stroke; an aunt in Lincoln took the four youngest children, among them the two girls, to live in Nebraska.

Dicy stayed with relatives in Kansas for four years, but came back to Lincoln and attended Whittier Junior High. She returned to Kansas and never came back to Lincoln. Hope visited her when she was 19 and Hope 10; shortly after that Dicy was married.

They are the only members of the immediate family living. Dicy lost track of the family shortly after she married and moved to Washington. Hope, as the youngest, never knew some of her older brothers and sisters.

"When you're busy raising a family things sort of slip by," Dicy said. "After a while it just seemed impossible to find them. I told people 'I have no family.'"

A cousin in Kansas was working on a family tree; he knew where Dicy was. He found another cousin who knew Hope's address. They passed along the information. A couple of months ago the sisters exchanged letters.

"When I got her letter, I just started shaking," Hope said. "I just about went to pieces."

Dicy flew out to Lincoln, but to make sure they would know each other, the sisters exchanged pictures.

"We haven't changed too much, really," Dicy said.

Hope took a month off from work and she and Dicy have visited relatives in Kansas and Nebraska. They've had many reunions in recent weeks.

"It's been like Thanksgiving everywhere we've been," Dicy said.

The sisters have had a lot of catching up to do. They've been remembering names and trying to find out what happened to members of their family. Some events are still hazy, but they know their parents, the aunt and uncle who adopted them and all their brothers and sisters have died.

"The first night she got here, we talked until 3:30 in the morning," Hope said. "And we haven't stopped talking since," Dicy added.

Nightmares, fear remain for children

Chowchilla, Calif. (AP) — They went to school Monday just like the other children in town, some of them even riding the yellow school bus. But four months after they were held hostage in the Chowchilla bus kidnaping, some of the 27 young victims still experience nightmares and nervousness.

In the hours after their release, they had handled the attention of reporters and townspeople with aplomb, telling with surprising detail and coolness their individual stories.

But negative reactions have since developed among some of the children, parents say.

Judy Reynolds, 13, is bothered because her eighth grade classmates still treat her as "one of those kids." Her sister Becky, 10, finds herself uncharacteristically shy.

"Sometimes I really need to talk about it and how I am feeling," Judy said. "Sometimes I don't want to talk about it at all."

Their mother, Evelyn, said she quit her night job as a convalescent hospital aide because the girls began having violent nightmares.

"Most of the children are different," Mrs. Reynolds said. "Most of us could use a psychologist, and some even a psychiatrist. It sure would help. But we just can't afford things like that."

Mrs. Reynolds also said that she and her husband have become more irritable since the trauma of the July 15 abduction.

"I go into depressed moods," she said. "I'd like to get away and forget about it all."

To which Judy responded: "Momma, you know anywhere we go, they're still talking about it."

Jennifer and Jeffrey Brown, who with their mother, Joan, have been the Chowchilla victims most accessible for interviews, have nevertheless experienced some behavior problems, Mrs. Brown said.

Jennifer, 9, has nightmares, and Jeff, 11, gets nervous when he rides the bus home from school each day. The children were abducted from a bus taking them home from summer school and held captive for 27 hours, including 16 hours in a buried moving van.

The 26 children were freed when their bus driver and two of the older boys pried the top of the moving van free.

An investigation later led to the arrests of three young San Francisco Bay Area men who were indicted in August on 27 counts of kidnaping and 18 of robbery involving personal possessions taken from the victims.

The three — Frederick N. Woods, 24, James Schoenfeld, 24, and his brother Richard, 23 — remain in custody in Oakland where the case was moved last week on a change of venue. No trial date has yet been scheduled.

Seemingly least affected by the trauma are the four preteen daughters of Celia Carrejo, all of whom were on the bus. Mrs. Carrejo says the girls seem untouched by the experience, perhaps because they keep active as a group making up and performing dances and singing with their mother.

Other children who were on the bus that day face crises unrelated to the kidnaping, particularly Jody Matheny, 10.

A progressive eye ailment is gradually blinding Jody, and he takes a Braille typewriter to school. His family's chief concern is not making Jody adjust to the kidnaping but helping him get prepared for the time when he will be sightless.

Vaccine may come up short

Washington (UPI) — In the latest setback for President Ford's swine flu immunization program, the U.S. Public Health Service said Monday only one in every 10 American children may get the shots because of a vaccine shortage.

There will be enough vaccine, however, to immunize chronically ill children between 3 and 18, the health service said.

The FHS also announced that its advisory committee on immunization practices now recommends a second swine flu shot, four weeks after the first shot, for young adults aged 18-24.

170 persons to look into assassinations

Washington (UPI) — The House Committee on Assassinations, meeting formally for the first time, announced Monday that a task force of 170 persons will conduct what it hoped will be the final, definitive investigation of the murders of John F. Kennedy and Martin Luther King.

Rep. Thomas M. Downing, committee chairman until he retires at the end of this year, told reporters after a two-hour closed session, "We're going down every street until we get a blind alley. Congress mandated us to do a thorough job."

Walter Fauntroy, Democratic Delegate from the District of Columbia and newly named chairman of a subcommittee to investigate the King slaying, said: "We want to find out what the evidence is and follow it where it leads, no matter where."

A subcommittee concentrating on the Kennedy killing 13 years ago this month will be headed by Rep. Richardson Preyer, D-N.C.

Downing said the full committee had asked the FBI and CIA for all documents and memoranda pertaining to the assassinations. An aide told UPI that a two-foot-high stack already had come in from the CIA.

Downing and Sprague said they had not yet seen a reported 1964 memo from FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, in 1964 which stated that Lee Harvey Oswald told Cuban officials he was going to kill President Kennedy more than a month before he actually did so.

Oswald was known to have visited the Cuban embassy in Mexico City before Kennedy was shot.

The Hoover memo, according to press reports, was found after a new search of bureau files at the committee's request.

Rep. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., another member of the committee, said the panel should "make it one of its first orders of business to obtain and evaluate" that document.

Downing, who is expected to be replaced as chairman by Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, D-Tex., when the new Congress convenes in January, said an investigative crew of 170 "sounds like a lot of people."

But he said it actually is a "bare bones staff" for the immense job, compared to that used by the Warren Commission which investigated the Kennedy killing.

The Warren Commission concluded that Oswald acted alone in assassinating

Kennedy. Evidence since indicates the FBI and CIA knew far more about Oswald's Cuban connections and had other background which the Warren panel and subsequent congressional investigative bodies never saw.

The committee spent the afternoon watching films of the actual Kennedy shooting.

One film strip has been interpreted by some as showing one or more people, possibly with rifles, standing on a grassy knoll overlooking the Kennedy motorcade at the time of the shooting. But Downing, after viewing the film again Monday said, "I didn't see any people on the knoll."

The committee was scheduled Tuesday morning to view slides and pictures taken immediately after King was killed.

JFK death documents may have been destroyed

Des Moines, Iowa (UPI) — A government investigator said Monday official documents relating to the assassination of President John F. Kennedy may have been destroyed and problems in obtaining critical evidence may undercut the success of a new assassination investigation.

David Belin, a Des Moines attorney who served on the staff of the Warren Commission and later directed a blue ribbon panel's investigation of the CIA's domestic abuses, said the newly created House Committee on Assassinations — which met for the first time Monday — faces insurmountable problems in reopening the investigation.

"It's going to be very difficult to put things together 13 years after the fact," Belin said. "I think it's imperative that the FBI and CIA grant complete access to their files, but I think there will be problems obtaining the evidence."

"I would have great concern about the destruction of any documents," he said.

Belin called for a reopening of the assassination investigation earlier this year and predicted a congressional investigation would support the Warren Commission's conclusion that Lee Harvey Oswald killed Kennedy.

However, he said the "Cuban connection" — Oswald's possible involvement with the regime of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro — had not been explored, largely due to the CIA's "coverup" of evidentiary materials.

"I don't think the Warren Commission did a full job of studying whether the Cubans were involved," he said. "I think, however, that the commission would... if it had known of the CIA's attempts to assassinate Castro."

Belin said documents recently released to him by the CIA under a Freedom of Information Act request "could be interpreted as supporting the reports of a possible relationship between Oswald and the Cuban government."

He said the evidence indicated Oswald may have informed Cuban officials of his intentions several weeks before the assassination, although it was not certain who Oswald's contact had been.

As to the assassination itself, "I think the truth already is known," Belin said. "On the issues of what motivated him (Oswald) or of a foreign conspiracy, I don't know if there will ever be general agreement."

Supreme Court willing to rule on race quotas

Washington (UPI) — The Supreme Court indicated Monday it is anxious to rule on the constitutionality of racial quotas for admissions to colleges and professional schools.

The justices also agreed to re-examine the question of how far employers must go in accommodating the religious beliefs of employees in setting work schedules — an issue on which it deadlocked two weeks ago.

In the education case, the court at the request of California temporarily blocked a State Supreme Court decision striking down a minority quota system for admission to the University of California at Davis Medical School.

The court told the state to submit a petition for full review within 30 days, and the stay is effective until the justices dispose of the case. Such stays often signal a willingness to grant full review of the issues.

Allan Bakke, 36, who is white, sued the state after he twice was turned down for admission to the medical school. The university acknowledged Bakke was more qualified than some minority applicants who were accepted, but said 16% of the school's 100 freshman seats were reserved for nonwhites.

The California Supreme Court rejected the university's argument that the quota was needed to bring minorities into the medical profession, ruling by a 6-1 vote that "a quota becomes no less offensive when it serves to exclude a racial majority."

In 1974, the U.S. Supreme Court considered the constitutionality of a quota system at a Washington state law school, but on a 5-4 vote, ruled the case moot after the graduation of the plaintiff, admitted under court order.

No such problem seems likely in Bakke's case since he has not been admitted, and the Supreme Court stay means he cannot yet demand admission.

On the religion issue, the court took for review a case filed in Kansas City by Larry G. Hardison, a member of the Worldwide Church of God, against Trans World Airlines and the machinists union.

Hardison sued after he was fired for refusing to work on Saturday, the sabbath observed by his sect. TWA claimed that favoring him would violate the union contract.

The case is similar to one on which the justices deadlocked, 4 to 4, two weeks ago. Justice John Paul Stevens did not sit on that case, but will do so in the new one.

In other action Monday, before recessing until Nov. 29, the justices:

Rejected challenges by Nassau County, N.Y., and Fairfax County, Va., to a federally authorized 16-month trial period for landings of the Concorde SST at Kennedy and Dulles airports outside New York City and Washington.

Over the votes of three justices, turned down an American Civil Liberties Union challenge to a Middletown, Pa., curfew ordinance for minors. The ACLU said such curfews are in effect in about 3,000 localities and violate minors' rights.

Agreed to decide if Michigan must pay a $5.8-million share of the cost of expanding special programs in the Detroit school system to foster integration.

Trooper's body bullet-riddled

Durham, N.C. (AP) — A Virginia state trooper abducted at gunpoint in his unmarked patrol car Monday died with more than 21 bullet wounds in his body. Authorities said they did not know whether he was killed by his captor or died in a hail of police gunfire at a roadblock.

The body of Garland West Fisher Jr., 33, was pulled from his car after North Carolina highway patrolmen used a tractor trailer rig as a roadblock to force a showdown on rain-slick Interstate 85 ten miles north of here.

Dr. Mac Reavis, assistant state medical examiner, said he determined in an autopsy Monday night that 14 bullets were fired into Fisher's body. Some of those bullets produced multiple wounds, he said.

Reavis said he believed he could determine which bullets were fatal but that it would be difficult to determine from which guns they were fired. He said he hoped to have complete autopsy results Tuesday.

Fisher's alleged abductor — Reuben Conley, 33, of Atlanta — was wounded in the chest, hand and knee and hospitalized in fair condition, said

Col. E.W. Jones of the North Carolina Highway Patrol.

Conley was charged by Virginia authorities with kidnapping and assault with a weapon. He also faced federal charges by the FBI, said Jones.

Jones said Conley's sister told him her brother was a "troubled guy... He thought someone was trying to kill him."

The drama began shortly before Fisher's shift was to end at midnight. The trooper stopped a car headed north in the southbound lanes of Interstate 85 south of Petersburg, Va.

Fisher was shot and forced to drive toward Atlanta, and then apparently was allowed to radio his headquarters, Jones said.

As a Virginia state police car trailed the automobile into North Carolina, the roadblock was set up with the tractor trailer put into position to simulate an accident. About two dozen North Carolina troopers were at the scene.

Jones said the car tried to avoid the roadblock, but he declined to give further details.

Fisher, a 12-year-veteran of the patrol, was married and the father of a 6-year-old girl.

He couldn't die so he got engaged

Point of the Mountain, Utah (UPI) — Admitted killer Gary Gilmore wanted to die Monday. He got engaged instead.

"I told him today, 'Yes, I will,' and he got a very surprised look on his face," said Nicole Barrett, a 20-year-old divorcee and mother of two who accepted the proposal during a two-hour meeting with Gilmore on death row.

"But I don't think any of the prison officials would ever consider it," the petite brunette added as she left the hand-holding rendezvous at Utah State Prison.

Warden Sam Smith said she was right.

"What for?" he said of Gilmore's desire to get married. "I see no basis for it."

But the warden said he hadn't formally been asked to allow a marriage and would give it "due consideration" if he were.

"If the death penalty is set aside, then that would be a different ballgame," Smith added.

Miss Barrett said she and Gilmore, 35, who faces the death penalty for the murder of a Provo, Utah, motel clerk, had been discussing marriage since his arrest in July.

Asked if she really wanted to marry someone who had begged the state to execute him, she replied: "Yes, you can understand that, can't you?"

Britain is soggy once again, but then it's only on the surface

By Robert B. Sempie Jr.
(c) New York Times

London — The great British drought of 1976 is over. But then again, it isn't. It depends on whom one consults one's shoes or the government.

The drought will not easily be forgotten. It consisted of three months of uncharacteristically sunny weather that turned this green country a dull brown, frightened the government, damaged crops and made bathing a luxury and washing the car a crime.

Where do things stand now? Ankle-deep in water. "We're paying for it now," a woman said the other day as she waited for a bus, her umbrella providing only meager protection against another downpour.

So Britain is Britain again — damp, unpredicttable, alive even in November with invigorated grass and optimistic flowers. But some people here are being cautious about it all, and they are the civil servants in Whitehall.

Although the government formally announced the end of the drought two weeks ago, the announcement was merely a technical response to the plain fact that it had rained nearly every other day in September and October.

At the same time, however, the government has yet to lift many of the emergency restrictions on water use imposed last summer. The standpipes have disappeared, but one cannot water one's lawn — although that would be redundant at the moment — or wash one's car, or use a hose in any way. And there are still some restrictions on industrial use of water.

"Why?" a sodden visitor asked John Stevens of the Department of the Environment.

"There is an area of doubt about underground sources," Stevens replied. "They took a hell of a caning."

Russell Clark, an official at the National Water Council, offered more details as he peered through his rain-spattered window. Reservoirs are mostly filled, he said, the rivers are flowing again, and areas that depend on run-off are nearly back to normal.

But areas that depend heavily on aquifers, or underground sources, are still not back to normal. These are the Thames district around London, Anglia to the east and the Southern District to the south and west.

In each case, Clark said, there is a "soil deficit" of several inches — that is, a deficit in the amount of water needed in the soil so that the water can percolate through to the underground sources that feed wells, streams and ultimately reservoirs. He was optimistic that the deficit could be made up quickly "if things keep going as they have been." London, for example, received 75% more than its normal October rainfall last month. But he also said that there was no cause to relax.

"It could happen again," he said, and on that point many experts are agreed. Britain has had six straight years of below-average rainfall, and some research indicates that dry summer conditions could be a pattern for the next 10 to 20 years.

Accordingly, Britain is planning for the future. A proposal to transfer supplies in Scotland to England in future emergencies has been rejected as prohibitively expensive. But a host of experiments are under way for under consideration involving the expansion of existing reservoirs, pumping water from around the country using related or contiguous rivers and lakes and finding new underground supplies.

"We've also found," Stevens said, "that people are still holding consumption down by about 10% below normal levels."

One reason for this is that some people may remain frightened by what they lived through. It was, for Britain, an eerie experience, a summer of joyous sunshine that grew increasingly disconcerting.

But a more obvious reason may be that when it is raining one does not need to use much water. One does not even like to think about water.

Brezhnev chides those who tell 'fairy tales'

(c) New York Times

Belgrade — Chiding those who would compare Soviet-Yugoslav relations with those of "the wolf and Little Red Riding Hood," Soviet leader Leonid I. Brezhnev arrived in Yugoslavia Monday for three days of talks with President Josip Broz Tito.

As a cold drizzle fell outside the presidential palace, Brezhnev planted two loudly audible kisses on the cheeks of his host for the benefit of cameramen. Marshal Tito, who seemed to be slightly more reserved in his greeting, looked healthy and recovered from his recently reported liver illness.

The visit by Brezhnev, his first to Yugoslavia in five years, had been planned since last April but postponed several times. No new policy trends on either the Soviet or Yugoslav side are expected to emerge from the meetings.

Brezhnev's reference to the "wolf and Little Red Riding Hood" was part of a toast he delivered at a formal dinner Monday night given by Tito.

Brezhnev, clearly referring to statements made during the recent American election campaign, said it had "recently become fashionable in the West to cast shadows" on good Soviet-Yugoslav relations.

"Authors of such fairy tales try to present Yugoslavia as a helpless Little Red Riding Hood which the terrible and bloodthirsty wolf — the aggressive Soviet Union — is preparing to dismember and devour," Brezhnev said.

Brezhnev added that he could not say which was more at the root of such alleged fabrications — "whether it is complete misunderstanding of the principles on which socialist countries build their relations, or the cynical belief that the public will swallow any lie if it is repeated frequently and stubbornly enough."

He went on to reiterate long-standing Soviet pledges to honor

Yugoslav sovereignty and its internal affairs.

But Brezhnev's visit to Yugoslavia and a visit he plans later this month to Rumania are considered visible indications of his interest in mending fences with foreign Communist parties not entirely subservient to Moscow, as well as with the so-called "nonaligned group of nations."

The Soviet Party, which includes Foreign Minister Andrei G. Gromyko and the party secretary for relations with foreign Communist parties, Konstantin F. Katushev, is expected to give fresh assurances to Yugoslavia of friendship and nonintervention.

At his welcoming dinner Monday night, Tito also delivered a toast, in which he pointedly spoke of Soviet-Yugoslav relations, based on "independence, sovereignty, equality, noninterference and respect for the different paths of internal development and peculiarities of the international positions of our countries and parties."

Tito decried the "intensified international arms race," calling for urgent action toward "complete disarmament," to be instituted under United Nations auspices.

Syrians silence guns of Beirut

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Syrian tanks and troops silenced the guns of Beirut on Monday in a massive occupation that handed Lebanon its first real chance for peace in 19 months of civil war.

Joyful Moslems slaughtered sheep in a traditional Arab gesture of welcome. Women sent up Arab cries of joy and dowsed Syrian soldiers with rose water and rice as columns of T62 and T54 tanks swept over the city from three directions.

"Allah is great," shouted bystanders as the camouflage painted tanks clanked by. "Arabs will be victorious."

The welcome was subdued in Christian quarters, where rightist militiamen ordered civilians to stay off the streets. Christian leaders seemed to feel more strongly the sting of Beirut's first foreign occupation since U.S. Marines landed to stop an earlier war in 1958.

Only a few instances of resistance were reported as the 6,000 troops and 400 tanks took over, all in Moslem and Palestinian-controlled areas. The Syrians fired only a half dozen grenades and a few rounds of submachine gun fire in a six-hour sweep that began with the first light of dawn.

By nightfall, they had established control over Beirut's battle zones, Palestinian refugee camps, radio stations, government buildings, the airport and key intersections. The sound of gunfire died away for the first time since an earlier cease-fire more than nine months ago.

"That's it. The war is over," exulted a Moslem Lebanese after driving the length of the front-line where thousands of his countymen have been killed.

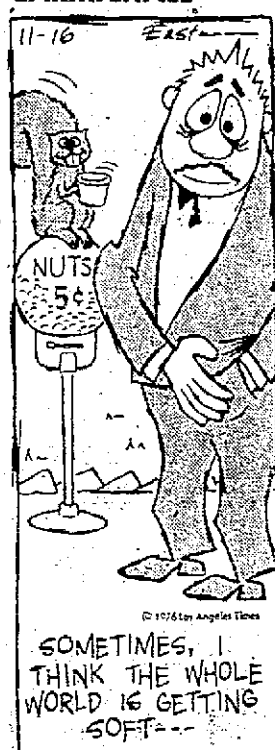

But observers noted that the religious, social and political divisions that exploded this tiny Arab country remained unsolved. The Syrian occupation provided only the force to prevent further fighting, they said, leaving solution of the problems for the future.

The Syrian forces slated a takeover of Tripoli, 60 miles north of Beirut, and of Sidon, 25 miles south, within the next few days, Arab League officials said.

This will complete their occupation of Lebanon except for a strip along the southern border with Israel, regarded as a danger zone where Syrian penetration would risk war with the Jewish state.

The Syrian intervention force, now numbering nearly 30,000, is the striking fist of an Arab League peace contingent ordered and financed by Arab kings and presidents in two summit conferences last month.

U.S. vetoes Vietnamese U.N. membership

United Nations, N.Y. (AP) — The United States vetoed Vietnam's application for United Nations membership Monday night in the Security Council.

The council voted 14-1 in favor of a resolution recommending that the General Assembly admit Vietnam to the United Nations. The Security Council's recommendation is required for the assembly to act on a membership application.

The negative vote by the United States, one of the five veto-holding permanent members of the council, killed the resolution.

It was the fifth time in slightly more than 14 months the United States vetoed Vietnamese applications for membership. The other four vetoes were cast on two occasions, on separate applications for membership by North and South Vietnam before the Southeast Asian nation was unified.

U.S. Ambassador William W. Scranton, explaining the latest veto, said Vietnam was not qualified for U.N. membership because its failure to account for some 600 Americans still missing in action from the Vietnamese war showed it lacked a "humanitarian" attitude. North Vietnamese troops and Viet Cong guerrillas forced the U.S.-backed South Vietnamese government to surrender in April 1975.

Both the "Provisional" South Vietnamese government and North Vietnam applied in July 1975 for U.N. membership. The applications were vetoed by America in August 1975 and again when they were reconsidered in September. The two zones were formally united as one Vietnam in February 1976.

Mr. Burns's Warning

Washington — The Federal Reserve Board chairman's warning to President-elect Jimmy Carter to go slow in stimulating the economy by traditional policies was as predictable as the coming of winter. It was only a matter of time.

Chairman Arthur E. Burns, after all, is one of the most enduring conservative figures in American public life. Since the Eisenhower administration, his has been a voice of fiscal caution and restraint, and with rare exceptions — such as an uncharacteristic expansion of the money supply in the election year 1972 — his record in office has borne out his views.

But it was not merely Burns's views that made his warning against economic stimulus predictable. In essence, that was what the close election just concluded was all about. Carter and the Democrats promised to use federal spending and taxing powers to stimulate demand, thus increasing business activity and creating new jobs to reduce unemployment. Gerald Ford and the Republicans said that was neither necessary — the economy was recovering without it — nor possible without rekindling an unacceptable inflation.

Burns said in congressional testimony this past week just about what Ford said in his campaign — that it was "entirely reasonable" to expect the economy to pick up speed on its own, and that federal stimulus would have an inflationary result. Since this conservative view was by no means routed in the presidential campaign, Burns had every reason to reassert it, and even though he later took pains to assure Carter that he expected to be able to cooperate with the new administration, the potential for disagreement between them obviously is considerable.

Burns's statements also suggest the uniquely divided nature of American government. In the Republican years now coming to an end, Richard Nixon and Ford had to contend with a Democratic Congress. But they had the Federal Reserve Board, though statutorily independent, mostly working in harmony with them, and their appointments had great effect on the Supreme Court and the federal judiciary. Now Carter will have a heavily Democratic Congress on his side, but must confront Arthur Burns as chairman of the Federal Reserve until 1978, as well as a Supreme Court with a majority of Nixon-Ford appointees. Whether in the next few years this division of powers will be a useful check on Carter or a frustrating drag on his administration remains to be seen.

For the immediate future, Burns's statements do raise the possibility of a battle with the Carter administration. Even Burns conceded that recovery from the recession of 1974-75 has been "incomplete," and with unemployment hovering just under eight per cent, that's putting it mildly. Carter's principal economic adviser, Laurence Klein, has said further economic stimulus probably will be necessary. Carter himself said in his post-election news conference that he was actively considering the matter, and on no issue is he more deeply committed by his campaign than on that of reducing unemployment.

Burns, of course, could prove to be right in his predictions that the economy will pick up by itself before January; but that is the same prediction the Ford administration has been making since mid-summer. The chances seem much greater that Carter will have to call for some form of stimulus in January, in which case the clear possibility now exists that Burns would take the Federal Reserve in the other direction, in order to counter the inflationary effect he fears.

Aside from the economic conflict itself, that could set off a major Democratic effort to restrict the independence of the Federal Reserve Board. Many congressional Democrats, including important committee chairmen, have long favored bringing the board under the influence of the executive branch; and in his campaign, Jimmy Carter said that the chairman's term should be made continuous with the president's—

Even though he later softened it, Burns's warning should have been a sharp reminder to Carter and his associates that conservative economic views are strongly entrenched in this country. In any conflict over the independence of the Fed, Arthur Burns knows he would have powerful support from the business and financial world. He may not have been challenging Jimmy Carter last week to such a battle, but he left little doubt that he would not back away from it, either. The next move is Carter's.

The New York factor

Former GOP national committeeman from Nebraska Dick Herman was quoted in a newspaper interview story as contending that when President Ford turned thumbs down on federal aid to New York City he wrote his own political death warrant. That is as believable a rationalization as any.

Herman, head of an Omaha trucking firm, believes that Ford's posture on New York City's problems caused him to lose that state's 41 electoral votes, and thus the election. Democrat Jimmy Carter won New York state by only 300,000 votes out of some 6 million cast. Carter's margin in the big city was the difference, Herman believes. A switch of those 41 electoral votes would have given the election to Ford. Parenthetically, Herman said vice presidential nominee Robert Dole if anything helped the Republican ticket by invigorating party workers and appealing to voters in the west, where Ford was strong.

Herman's analysis of the election is supportable.

Certainly Carter made every effort to remind New York City's millions of Ford's rather imperious disregard of the city's rotting municipal financial structure.

The President-elect as a candidate hammered away at the theme, telling New Yorkers he "would never tell you to drop dead," as Ford did. He told them that not only in the closing days of the campaign at the rally in the garment district, but even before his assured nomination, on the day he entered New York to later claim, the prize. Carter knew then that the inner city vote would be crucial for him, and he made the most of Ford's position at a welcoming rally outside the Americana Hotel.

Standing above the sweaty crush of humanity blocking the intersection in front of the hotel, Carter pledged his support of New York to an applauding throng of natives and newsmen. The natives for the most part were strangely subdued. They really didn't know who he was, and he talked funny. But when he said he would never tell New York to drop dead, they cheered. It was the loudest and about the only spontaneous cheer of the day, as we recall.

But things picked up from that point for Carter in New York City. Mayor Abe Beame in response grandly announced that the city would put the southerner in the White House.

"Our great city will give our great party its greatest victory," the tiny mayor shouted, standing on tiptoes to reach the microphone in addressing the crowd.

Well, as we all now know, it was not a landslide — nationally, or in New York state. The Democratic Party has seen greater victories.

But Mayor Beame's "great city" did its part for Carter, and the mayor has to be given a place in the front of the lines of people with their "want" lists.

A battle finally won

We were struck by the recent observation of a columnist that while Jimmy Carter was elected president on a promise of bolder leadership for the 70s and 80s, his little church in Plains was still fighting the battle of the 60s.

That battle, part of a larger war, was in part won by progressive forces Sunday as Carter's church voted to end its 1965 prohibition against blacks and "civil rights agitators," as church members.

With Carter assuming the role as "peacemaker" and blaming himself for all the attention that has beamed in on the Plains Baptist Church, the congregation after nearly three hours of deliberation and three weeks of steadily building controversy voted 120-66 to open the doors to members of all races. The congregation also voted to keep its minister, who had openly opposed the closed-door policy when it was reaffirmed by the board of deacons some days ago.

It might be said that 120-66 is not a ringing endorsement of the principle of integration, but it is a hopeful sign that the new day is dawning in the pockets of bigotry remaining in the rural south. If only that change is felt in pockets of bigotry elsewhere.

There is no minimizing the pressure the people of the Plains church felt, with the congregation's most prominent member about to assume the presidency of the United States; carried to office in large part on the votes of black southerners.

If news reports are to be believed, many in the congregation felt relief in repenting of their past discriminatory practices. Prospective members will still be judged, the congregation said, but not solely on the basis of the color of their skin.

Such is the power of persuasion. The national spotlight focused its powerful, burning beam upon a small, rural southern church. The church changed, probably in part because it wanted to and partly because it was forced to.

But the members of the Plains Baptist Church were pretty much out front about their segregation policy and how they dealt with the problems involved, as the south as a whole has been — in stark and favorable contrast with much of the north.

GOP in distress

Washington — In the privacy of the Republican policy councils, the party pros are more distressed over their setback on Capitol Hill than the loss of the White House.

They see the future of the Republican Party threatened by the shattering congressional defeat. They had expected to gain 15 to 50 House seats. Yet of the 252 Democratic incumbents, only seven lost their seats.

The Democrats overcame their losses by taking some Republican seats, with an apparent net gain of two seats. (At this writing, the votes are still being recounted in two races.)

In making their private postmortems, the GOP strategists have acknowledged that the prevailing political winds should have favored them. The Democrats had picked up a number of marginal seats two years ago in the post-Watergate landslide. In the past, the losing party has usually bounced back at the next election and has recaptured the close seats. But of the 74 freshmen Democrats, only two lost the seats they had won in 1974.

The Republican pros had also calculated that the sex-in-congress scandal would hurt the Democrats. From President Ford on down, the GOP had gone on the offensive against the Democratic Congress. Both Republican Superstars, Gerald Ford and Ronald Reagan, had campaigned generously for House members. Then, at the last moment, $308,470 was pumped into the 33 tightest races. Still, the Republicans couldn't hold their own.

The results have stirred talk in GOP circles about reassessing the future and restructuring the party. This could lead to some major changes before the Republicans go to the polls again in 1978.

At the same time, a post-election analysis by the Democratic Study Group shows that some new political tactics paid off.

The party tacticians pointed out that the

Jack Anderson

Republicans would regain several marginal seats unless the Democrats began at once to strengthen their hold on them. Thus, the 1974 election had hardly faded from the headlines before the Democratic Study Group and the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, working together, launched a "Get Elected" campaign.

The campaign committee immediately began deciding where funds in $1,000 to $5,000 sums would do the most good. The following January, February and March, campaign workshops were held. The Democratic congressmen and their aides were instructed on producing newsletters, media coverage and other self promotion.

The DSG's Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., and executive director John Conlon emphasized that the congressmen not only must work hard, but must appear to do so. This meant they must show up for as many of the 1,300 votes per session as possible.

One of the most successful tactics, according to the DSG analysis, was encouraging the congressmen to go out in vans and converted mobile homes like old-time circuit riders to meet with voters in their home neighborhoods.

The congressmen were also encouraged to organize weekend "town meetings" in out-of-the-way corners of their districts. "Take government to the people," Conlon urged. One of the unexpected victories on November 2, Rep. Floyd Fitzhugh, D-Ind., held 200 of these meetings.

It appears from the confidential analysis that the House Democrats helped to fashion their own 1976 victories.

Sauce for both the goose and gander

Boston — One of the early problems to confront Jimmy Carter as president will almost certainly be the ripening scandal of South Korean covert activities in this country. It is a delicate problem with disturbing implications, involving as it does both foreign policy and domestic politics, morals and law.

Agents of Park Chung Hee, the South Korean dictator, have spent millions here in recent years trying to buy influence. That much is already clear from newspaper investigations. What makes it especially awkward for Carter is that leading Democratic congressmen have been among the main recipients of the Korean largesse.

The House Democratic whip, Rep. John J. McFall of California, admitted after the election — an aide had denied it before — that he got $3,000 from Tongson Park, a Korean businessman and operator in Washington. The money was not a campaign contribution but went into general office funds for McFall's use. He also got an expensive digital watch and silver tea service.

The retiring speaker of the House, Carl Albert, has had warm relations with South Korean representatives, and he has on his staff in an influential role a person of Korean birth, Mrs. Sue Park Thomson. Last summer the House International Relations Committee, in a rare action, voted unanimously for a resolution that among other things criticized the trial in Seoul of 18 opponents of President Park. At the last minute Speaker Albert took the resolution off the House calendar.

There are suspicions, too, about the activities of the Korean evangelist, Sun Myung Moon. Recent reports suggest that South Korea's Central Intelligence Agency (the KCIA) inspired 1974 demonstrations by Moon's followers against the impeachment of Richard Nixon.

The KCIA has also reportedly been using its physical muscle inside the United States. Its agents are said to operate in a large Korean community in Los Angeles, intimidating and even beating individuals opposed to President Park.

All this offends the most basic American sense of self-respect. For a minor foreign power to treat the United States as a target for bribery and intimidation is humiliating.

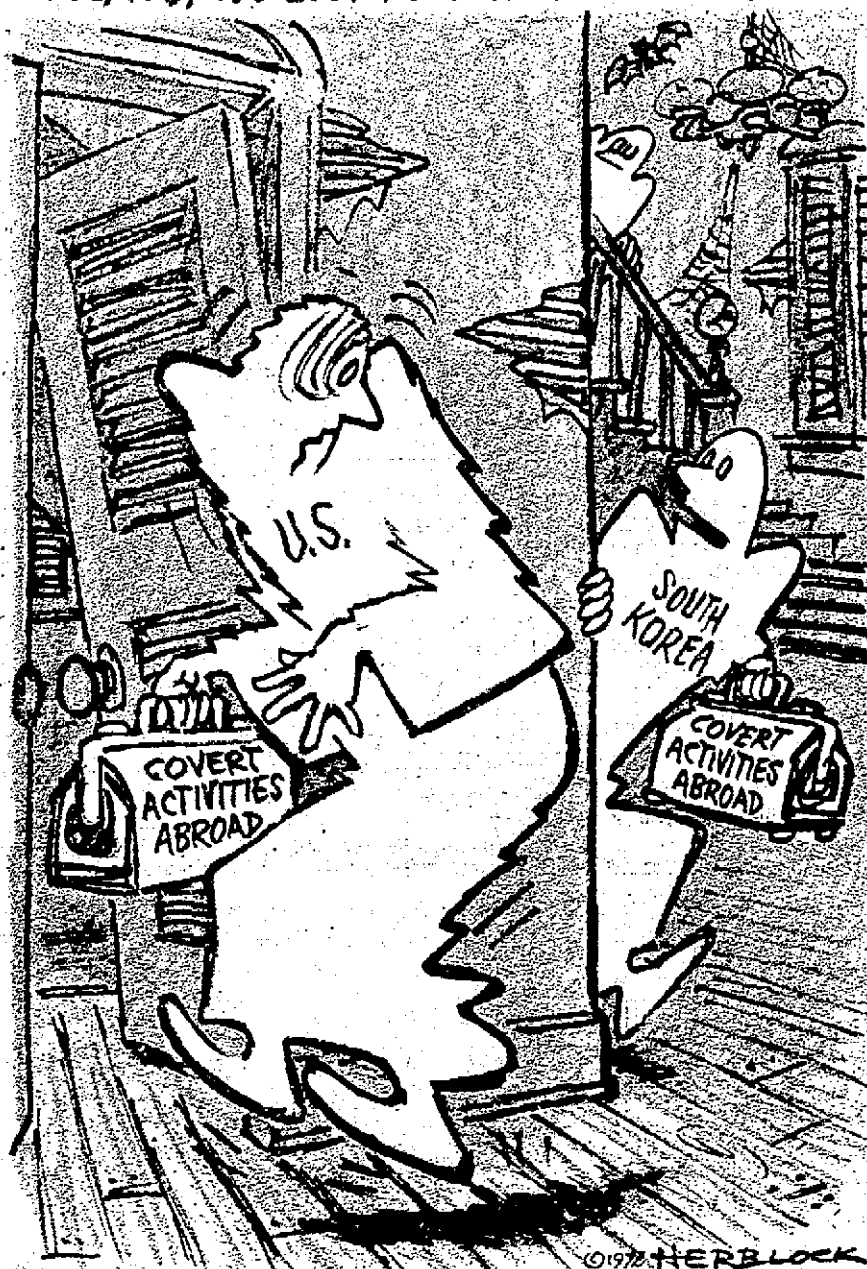

And South Korea is not the only country to have agents acting here in a brazen way. Chile and Iran are two other examples. The Chilean secret police are believed to have connections with Cuban exiles suspected of various acts of terrorism, including the murder in Washington of the former Chilean foreign minister, Orlando Letelier.

Most Americans must find it repellant to have such things happening in our country. But how many have stopped to think that what has been done here is exactly what we have done unto others? The American CIA has paid politicians and editors in countries around the globe. It has planned assassinations, waged secret wars and encouraged military coups against constitutional governments. All that is familiar stuff after the intelligence investigations of the last two years.

The Korean scandal reminds us how dangerous it is for the United States to act as if its constitutional, legal and ethical standards stopped at the water's edge. If we pay foreign politicians as a matter of course, and wiretap our nationals abroad and plot violence, it is hard to object to other countries behaving the same way.

The first step in dealing with the covert South Korean activities is to have a tough official investigation and get the facts into the open. The next is to make clear that this country will not tolerate dirty tricks here by the secret policemen and agents of other countries — whether their governments are communist "enemies" or right-wing "friends." But such actions are not likely to be effective unless we convince the world that we are prepared to abide by similar rules ourselves.

When President Ford was asked in 1974 whether it was his policy to "destabilize" other governments, he replied that every country does that sort of thing. It was a cynical answer — and one that is self-defeating for this country because it does not fit our image of ourselves.

The Carter administration should move quickly to do what Ford refused: limit covert operations by law to situations that, in Clark Clifford's phrase, threaten to have "a profound impact on the continued existence of this country." And the administration should underline its commitment to law by bringing to book, at last, those U.S. intelligence officials who lied under oath and committed other crimes.

None of that is easy, but as a matter of simple self-interest it is necessary. And after all, it was Jimmy Carter who said, beginning as long ago as last March, "Our policies should be as open and honest and decent as the American people themselves."

Remember, ladies, your home is YOU

New York — "No major crisis in a woman's life," said a psychologist, "is likely to cause more prolonged emotional strain than the experience of redecorating her home."

"This surfacely ordinary, and apparently trivial experience presents the average woman with a challenge which is comparable with the challenge that going to war makes to a man. It tests her innate femaleness in the same way that a man feels his masculinity is tested in battle."

Well, mercy. In the light of current liberated thinking, such a statement would appear to be idiotic. Femaleness is now considered an irrelevant sort of word, and so is war. According to "modern" psychological theory, the chief cause of emotional strain is one's sex life. This is the going criterion of success or failure. Nothing else is considered worthy of causing that much stress — least of all, reupholstering, color-coordination and where to put the convertible bed.

But wait. As many an interior decorator tells it, only a small percentage of American women are really "modern" enough, even in sex-silly 1976, to look upon redecorating lightly.

"You may not suffer a nervous breakdown during the process," says one, "but it is still for a woman one of life's most traumatic experiences. Even among the most liberated of you, your home or apartment represents the 'larger self' that you show to outsiders."

"Your personality is your intimate self. Your clothes are an enhancement of your personality. But the place you call home, and how it appears to others, is the ultimate extension of a woman, and the contemplation of changing it, from one look to another, causes enormous distress. This is because the majority of women, like the majority of men, are not sufficiently confident of their artistic ability to cope with the job of expressing themselves through their larger selves."

In an effort to diminish the dangers of the "decorator distress" syndrome, Barbet Simons

Phyllis Battelle

(A.I.D.) gave out some simple hints for women in the throes of trauma . . .

"In any house or apartment," said the decorator firmly, "there are three most important pieces of furnishing to start with. Make them your focal points, and planning will be easier:

"In the dining room (or area), the chandelier is the most important piece.

"In the living room, it is the coffee table.

"In the bedroom, it is the bedspread.

"Believe it or not, if these three things are done with great style, the rest of each room will take care of itself. They will carry the other furniture. They will make the room they're in come alive."

Simons warns against going to department stores, or researching home magazines, in search of "model room" ideas. "They're too impersonal. The least personal thing in the world is an Italian Provincial living room.

"But often women take this watery middle ground because it's safe. They're afraid if they introduce a Chinese gong, or something, into a living room, people will think they're crazy. Well, I'd rather have a couple of things in my living room that I could be called crazy for — like some paintings that only I like — than to have an impersonal if technically correct room."

When Simons conveys this idea to a client — when he as an expert reassures her that family pictures are not only acceptable but in impeccable taste, for example — she stops being afraid to personalize her home.

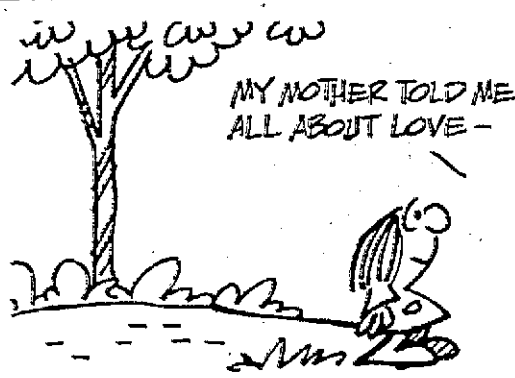

Her trauma is immediately, significantly reduced. "I try to tell clients that nothing — no furniture or decoration — is in bad taste, if they honestly love it. I tell them this, not just to buy their confidence but because it's true. Your home is YOU — not me, and not the November issue of a magazine. So stop being afraid of your own taste!"

His first step in visiting a new client, said Simons, "is to ask which pieces of furniture she or her husband like best. I find that men are far more sentimental than women. They will take a stand and say 'Just keep your hands off this chair' — or whatever it is they like. Women, on the other hand, may reject a piece of furniture they are fond of, if they suspect the decorator really doesn't like it in the room. I wish they'd be as open as men are, because the sentimental pieces — even when they're offbeat things that were picked up on trips — make ideal furnishing to plan a decor around. They're personal. Being personal, they're vital."

Unfortunately, says the decorator, too many American apartments and houses today are look-alike boxes, "with no kind of architectural character to give them individuality. And since the structures themselves have no character, it is up to the people inside to have character — and the courage to express it."

Weather perfect for corn harvest

During the past week, weather conditions in Nebraska were excellent for corn harvesting, but slowed winter wheat growth, according to the Nebraska Crop and Livestock Reporting Service.

Absence of rainfall again caused topsoil moisture supplies to decline to 96% short with only 4% adequate in the state, the service said in its weekly crop-weather report.

Subsoil moisture supplies declined further to 97% short and 3% adequate. A year ago, topsoil was 79% short and subsoil 96% short.

Nearly 95% of the Nebraska corn crop had been harvested, compared to a normal rate of 80% and nearly 100% completion a year ago.

Sorghum harvest, too, was virtually complete over the state. This was ahead of the normal 90%, but about the same as last year.

With no measurable precipitation, wheat conditions statewide continued to decline, the service said.

"Moisture is needed in all areas to insure adequate plant growth before cold weather sets in," the report noted.

Wheat condition was reported to be 8% poor, 59% fair, 27% good and 6% excellent. Wheat in the south central district was in the most favorable condition, the service reported.

"Cattle continued to graze on corn and sorghum stalk fields across the state, while some farmers were stacking the crop residues for future use, the report stated.

The only station reporting measurable precipitation last week was Sidney with .03 of an inch.

Corps plans to buy river wildlife habitat

Omaha (UPI) — The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers said Monday it plans to purchase thousands of acres of land along the Missouri River in Nebraska and Iowa for wildlife habitat.

The corps said early estimates place the purchase figure at $5 million for land between Sioux City, Iowa, and Rulo, Neb. Specific proposals for the land acquisition will be outlined during public meetings in late February or early March.

The corps said the land would be used solely for fish and wildlife and wouldn't be developed for other recreational activities.

The purpose of the massive project would be to replace wildlife habitat eliminated when the corps began its project in 1945 to straighten the Missouri to provide adequate navigation for barge traffic and built six mainstem dams upstream to control flooding.

The corps said the purchases must be approved by Congress and were three to four years away from becoming a reality.

Many express interest in ammunition plant

Grand Island (UPI) — A Central Platte Natural Resources District official Monday said the University of Nebraska and the State Game and Parks Commission are interested in the 27 acres of land available at the Cornhusker Army Ammunition Plant at Grand Island.

Pete Siemers, district programs director, said NRD and commission officials have agreed on the potential use of the undeveloped land owned by the federal government, but he said he did not know the university's proposed use.

He said the Central Platte NRD's primary interest is to develop the land for environmental education with long-term development of four or five small ecological systems.

At present, the district has outdoor classrooms at several schools in Grand Island and also has an environmental program for sixth grade students at Camp Augustine.

Siemers said the district was advised Monday by the General Services Administration that the Game Commission and the university were interested in the land.

The Hall County Board earlier indicated it may want to use the land for a landfill. However, Siemers said the letter from GSA did not mention any written request from the board.

A Union Pacific spokesman, Barry Combs of Omaha, said the broken wheel was on the first car of the 43 cars derailed. A shoe-fly track was built around the wreckage and west-bound trains were moving Saturday night, with eastbound trains going through Sunday night on the regular roadbed.

Fire interrupts oil processing

Scottsbluff (AP) — Fifty thousand barrels of oil weren't processed during a nine-day shutdown of part of Nebraska's only oil refinery following a Nov. 4 fire.

Plant Manager Don Lowder said two units at the Cooperative Refinery Association were put back into operation Saturday and a third will be in operation Wednesday.

He said the plant was unable to process 50,000 barrels of crude oil while the units were shut down for repairs.

A damage estimate of $10,000 was made the day of the fire by Scottsbluff Fire Marshal Frank Costa but Lowder said Monday "figuring that will take weeks." He cited replacement and repair of switches, wiring, conduit and insulation.

A de-salting tank where the fire erupted will not be repaired for "a couple of weeks" but this will not hold back production, Lowder said.

The fire started when a hose leading from the de-salting broke and a nearby burner ignited vapors from hot crude oil. Up to 75 Scottsbluff city firemen, Scottsbluff volunteer firemen and CRA employees battled the blaze. Two CRA employees were injured.

State leaves current sales, income taxes unchanged for 1977

By Dick Holman
Star Staff Writer

Despite the warning flag Lincoln businessman Bill Harris raised again Monday, state officials decided to leave current Nebraska tax rates unchanged in calendar 1977.

By a 4-0 vote with Auditor Ray A.C. Johnson absent, the State Board of Equalization left in effect the record-high rates of 3% on sales and 17% of an individual's federal liability for income.

Those rates went into effect in September, after an August emergency session made necessary because tax money under the 2.5-15% formula wasn't enough to pay the state's bills.

State Tax Commissioner William Peters offered the motion to maintain those rates, based on national and Nebraska Revenue Department indicators used to project a $16-million balance next June 30. That includes an "overlevy" or cushion of just over 3%; legal minimum and maximum are 3% and 7%.

The action came after Harris appealed to board members: "We must face reality. State spending is increasing more rapidly than constant tax rates can bring in." He cautioned against "false hopes" that the recently increased rates will produce the $460 million required in fiscal 1976-77.

Said Harris, asked by board chairman Gov. J. James Exon if he would raise both the sales and income tax rates again: "I would say that you had no other choice."

He suggested that an 18% income tax rate will produce about the same amount of state revenues as are projected under the 17% level. Thus Harris challenged Peters' calculations in the "nearly as possible equal" test. State law requires about a 50-50 liability from the sales and income taxes.

Peters' 50-50 chart puts 17% on income as the maximum with a 3% state sales tax rate; boosting the income side would require moving the sales rate to 3.5%. Harris disagreed, saying Peters' projection is overly optimistic, and predicted the 3%-plus overlevy will be insufficient.

Harris reminded board members he said last year that tax rates then in effect wouldn't produce revenues required. He accurately forecast that projections were too high.

He declared that the Nebraska shortfall will be repeated next year using existing tax rates. He cited the nationwide economic growth slowdown, but particularly stressed Nebraska agricultural problems caused by declining production prices and escalating land prices.

For the "first time," Harris said, "there is no bright spot" ahead for the ag sector, in which there's general agreement "we are sitting on a time bomb" across America.

The increases in growth projected in most tax categories won't be achieved, Harris said, emphasizing that even if gross ag sales are up, profits will be down.

Even from raising the income tax rate from 15% to 17%, "I submit to you that 2% of nothing is still nothing in the agricultural community."

The board is playing it too close on the overlevy because an error of only a few percentage points can cut millions banked on, forcing the treasury into the red, Harris said. He predicted state agency spending closer to each's authorized maximum because of tighter budgets, foreclosing any "bonus" possibilities of lapsed year-end funds.

Moreover, Harris said it's "political reality" that the food sales tax will be repealed and that the Legislature must make good an error that cost Nebraska schools $2.5 million, rendering income expectations further precarious.

Board member Allen Beermann, secretary of state, raised the possibility of the Legislature repealing the food sales tax and piggyback $16 individual tax credit, and the impact on cities' tax coffers. Peters said he hadn't any estimates of the effect on statewide receipts in the 50-50 test.

The 1976 Tax Reform Act is expected to broaden by $4.8 million overall the income tax base in Nebraska, but Exon and Peters acknowledged more federal reform legislation in 1977, especially of deductions, will alter that base substantially.

Peters maintained his projections will hold up but admitted they're "entirely dependent on the economic situation in the country."

Still, Harris insisted the board "raise taxes to the real level where they should be." He said that would "discourage" thinking, notably in the Legislature, that additional spending programs are possible.

Exon and Beermann suggested that might invite increased spending instead. Harris said a companion decline in revenues would rather force spending cuts. But Exon stressed little leeway allowed in 75% of the state budget, because of built-in, automatic and escalating expenditures the Legislature committed.

"I think the Legislature ought to take full responsibility for setting the tax rates," Harris said. Exon agreed: "We're the only state in the U.S. where the Legislature does not have the courage to set the tax rates after they set the spending rates."

Meanwhile, Harris said a fiscal-year shortfall under the 3-17% formula "will then compound the problem" in the remainder of calendar 1977.

The governor said the board has "other escape valves" in that case, via legal provisos for later regular or emergency meetings to adjust the rates. The state treasurer also voted not to tamper with the current levels.

State jobless rate continues to drop

The Nebraska unemployment rate continued to decline in October, with 3.8% or 27,000 persons out of work. That compares to a 4% September rate and 5.4% in October 1975.

For each 10 persons jobless, Omahans accounted for almost six. The Omaha market recorded 6.2% out of work in October, but that was still a decrease from 6.6% in September and 8.7% in October a year ago.

In Lincoln, the employment report remained rosy, as the jobless rate dropped from 3.2% in September to 3% in October, also a decline from 4.2% in October 1975.

The rates translate into numbers of person unemployed: Statewide — 27,000 in October, 28,400 in September, 38,700 in October 1975. Omaha — 15,500 in October, 16,700 in September, 22,200 in October last year. Lincoln — 3,000 in October, 3,200 in September, 4,150 in October 1975.

A Nebraska Labor Department spokesman said "the decline in unemployment is mostly a seasonal matter" and was expected. The Omaha rate is falling because the city "just didn't have its drop this summer" when unemployment remained high but the statewide rate was balanced out favorably by improvements in the Lincoln and outstate job pictures.

However, the Labor Department expects unemployment to increase slightly in November. That's "dependent upon the weather" and with little snow or moisture to date, that "may not change too much," the spokesman said.

Ed Committee to hold hearings on amendment

The Legislature's Education Committee will hold two public hearings regarding implementation of constitutional amendment 6A, Bellevue Sen. Frank Lewis said Monday.

General election voters approved the amendment, which permits contracting with institutions not owned or controlled by the state to serve handicapped children. The services must be nonsectarian.

Lewis, Education Committee chairman, said both hearings will begin at 10:30 a.m. The Lincoln session Monday will be in Room 2102 of the Capitol; the Omaha hearing Nov. 24 in the Civic Center Building at 1819 Farnam.

Approval of the amendment means only that the contracting concept is authorized now under the Nebraska Constitution; to put any operational provisions into effect, the Legislature must first pass such legislation.

Search called off for two thought drowned in Platte

North Bend (AP) — Regional Civil Defense Director Marvin Hafits of Fremont said Monday a search had been called off for two possible drowning victims in the Platte River near North Bend.

Dodge County Sheriff Richard Wennstedt said a deer hunter reported Saturday he had seen a boat capsizing in the Platte about four miles west of North Bend.

The hunter said there were two men in the boat. Hafits said the capsized boat has not been found and there have been no reports of missing persons.

Robert Phares
... time for change

North Platte mayor eyes governorship

North Platte (AP) — Mayor Robert Phares says he is giving serious consideration to seeking the Republican nomination for governor in 1978.

On Dec. 7, Phares will complete eight years as North Platte mayor. He did not run for reelection, saying he had decided to retire from municipal politics after two terms.

"It is time for a change," he said, adding that he is not retiring because he is tired of public office.

Phares, a former president of the Nebraska League of Municipalities, said he has received "a lot of encouragement from around the state from a cross-section that would indicate a strong base of support" in a bid for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

He will "start meeting with key people," he said, and "to know what direction this will take by early in 1977."

Phares is a partner in an insurance agency. He was elected mayor at 28 and had not held public office previously.

His father-in-law, State Sen. Myron Rumery, represents the North Platte area in the Legislature.

200 expected at Farm-City Week breakfast meet

About 200 persons are expected to attend the annual Farm-City Week breakfast to be sponsored here Nov. 23 by the five Lincoln area Kiwanis clubs.

The function at the Nebraska Center pairs farmers and ranchers as guests of members of the Sunrise, Downtown, Capital City, Northeast and Cornhusker Kiwanis Clubs.

This year's speaker is Dr. William Splinter, chairman of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln Department of Agricultural Engineering, who will discuss energy needs and challenges. Dr. Splinter has been a member of the Federal Energy Advisory Committee.

Hearing will be held on power disputes

United Press International

The Unicameral's executive board Monday voted to hold a public hearing to air disputes between public power districts and municipalities over electric generation and transmission.

The board also decided to hold a hearing Nov. 23 to interview persons interested in being named executive director of the legislative staff. Returning speaker Jules Burbach of Hartington has indicated a strong interest in the job. Applications from others have been requested.

Sen. Richard Lewis of Holbrook brought up the power issue. He said a number of complex and interrelated disputes have surfaced between power districts and municipalities.

He suggested that legislative committees could act as a clearinghouse for the disputes in hopes the problems could be resolved in the future by bringing out publicly all sides of the issue.

Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island made the motion to call a hearing of the executive board and the Unicameral's Public Works Committee to provide the forum for airing the power disputes. The hearing will be arranged for sometime in the next two weeks.

Lewis said one problem deals with power supply contracts between the Nebraska Public Power District and rural power districts, which, he said, is compounded by the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool NPPD serves nearly all rural districts.

He said the power pool has electricity to spare but cannot sell it to rural districts, even at a "preferential rate," because of the NPPD contracts.

Maintenance report shows 'waste'

United Press International

"This report is a fiscal horror of neglect and waste of our state resources."

Members of a legislative subcommittee probing the maintenance, or lack of, of state-owned buildings agreed Monday with that statement in a draft of a report on findings.

Roger Rutledge, a legislative staff member who helped draft the report, asked if the statement was too harsh.

"That's the way we found it. I don't think we should soften it," responded Sen. John Savage of Omaha, a member of the subcommittee of the Unicameral's executive board headed by Sen. Ralph Kelly of Grand Island.

The report said the maintenance project backlog now totals $30 million, $19.2 million of which is attributed to the University of Nebraska.

The subcommittee's job is to come up with a plan to provide maintenance for state buildings. The long range goal is to save tax money by not having to replace buildings.

"Maintenance dollars are unpopular, unromantic and downright threatening to Nebraska political leaders," the report said. It explained it seems politically better somehow for a state senator to have a "new edifice in his home district than (to apply) conservation" in buildings.

The next question the subcommittee must address is how to get rid of that backlog of maintenance work.

George Gerdes of Alliance, in August 1973.

From discussions with legislative employees, Kelly said, he gets the feeling, "We do not have proper direction. Our employees are not happy." He said employees with problems must now go to their immediate supervisor, "Who is always the problem."

Se. Walley Barnett of Lincoln, the only one to vote against the interview session, said he thought the director decision should be left to the new executive board to be selected by the Legislature next year.

Burbach, admitting he would like to have the job, said he feels it is "extremely important to have a director." He said the legislative process would be a "smoother running operation" with an overall director.

Sullivan named president of wheat growers group

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

North Platte — John Sullivan of Wallace was named president of the Nebraska Wheat Growers Association Monday at the 23rd annual convention of the Nebraska-Wyoming Wheat Growers Association.

Sullivan will be assisted by four vice presidents, Ed Hahn of Wallace, Elton Haarberg of Imperial, Ray Jackson of Lyman and Bruce Swanson of McCook. Bob Becker of McCook will continue to serve the group as secretary-treasurer.

The convention broke up into committee meetings to consider proposed resolutions covering everything from wheat taxes to the selection of a new president for the University of Nebraska.

The Foreign Agricultural Service, a U.S. Department of Agriculture agency that funds overseas sales of farm products, has warned wheat growers that less federal money will be available for wheat export sales promotion next year.

The only apparent method available to raise the needed money is to increase the wheat tax from a fourth of a cent a bushel to half a cent a bushel, growers were told.

Some wheat growers indicated they might oppose the selection of Clayton Yeutter as president of the University of Nebraska. The growers are upset over a speech Yeutter made two years ago indicating what could be grown and sold for $2 a bushel. The growers say the data did not include a cost figure for the value of the land. Growers say taxes and interest on the land value should be included in cost of production information.

Some wheat growers are upset over a proposal to have a checkoff program to build a state-owned grain alcohol plant.

"Most growers support the idea of a checkoff, but they want shares of stock in the proposed alcohol plant issued to the farmers in return for the checkoff funds. We want the farmers to own the plant, not the state," said Vic Haas of Hemingford.

Growers were advised by their national president, Don Woodward of Pendleton, Ore., to "seek some way of establishing a grain reserve program that won't hurt farmers, because a new farm law is likely to include some kind of a reserve program."

Woodward told the convention the organization's effort to raise funds to sue the government for establishing an embargo on grains had been effective even though the case didn't ever go to court.

"It made them take notice of us. Until we had the legal fund we were just another commodity organization," he said.

Woodward said the wheat growers could take full credit for increasing the loan rate for wheat from $1.25 a bushel to $2.25.

"We are not entirely happy with the new rate. It's too low, but it is a tremendous aid in orderly marketing of wheat by spreading out the marketing throughout the year," he said.

Woodward told the growers "write to your congressmen now, because decisions on new farm legislation are likely to be made in the next 30 days."

Woodward said there are four farm programs that will die at the end of this year if Congress doesn't act.

"There is the Public Law 480 program that donates food to other countries, the federal insecticide, fungicide and rodenticide act, the food stamp program, and the general farm program," he said.

Youths really didn't like movie

Omaha (AP) — Two Omaha teen-agers spent some time at Central Police Headquarters Sunday night after a scuffle developed when they demanded their ticket money back because they didn't like the film.

Police said the boys, 14 and 15, went to the Astro Theater and bought tickets to see "Norman ... Is That You," starring Redd Fox.

Police said they returned to the box office a few minutes later, voiced displeasure with the movie and demanded their money back.

Officers said a 17-year-old girl in the ticket booth hesitated to return the money and the older boy grabbed her by the blouse and tried to pull her over the counter.

Other theater employees intervened, a scuffle developed and police were called.

Reports said the first officer to arrive was punched on the nose by the younger youth. More officers arrived and handcuffed the struggling youths.

Police said one of the boys kicked out a window on the way out the door.

The two were taken to the police station and later released pending further proceedings. They face juvenile charges of destruction of property and resisting arrest.

Damage to the theater was estimated at about $400. The ticket taker, the police officer and both boys were not injured.

Man vindicated in killing faces driving charge

Denver (UPI) — A Western Nebraska man, acquitted last week on murder charges in the slaying of a Denver bar owner, was arrested by police on drunk driving charges, authorities said Monday.

Authorities said Henry Atwood, 59, of North Platte, was spotted driving "in an erratic manner" Sunday and arrested. He was taken to police headquarters where officers said he failed a breathalyzer test.

Investigators said Atwood's driving license had been suspended previously. He was acquitted last week on charges in the 1975 robbery-murder of tavern owner Orle Quintana.

Flu clinics strenuous

By Gracia McAndrew
Star Staff Writer

The towns were different. The faces were different. But the situation was the same.

In two short weeks, Dr. Robert Fox, Vicky Tumblin and Mary K. Weatherfield of the State Health Department had become veterans at conducting swine flu immunization clinics. The three comprise one of three state immunization teams traveling throughout Nebraska.

Recently, the trio was in Polk County, where they traveled from six to 13 miles between four small towns — Shelby, Osceola, Stromsburg and Polk.

Throughout the day, the team opened one clinic for an hour, closed shop, packed the gear and traveled to the next town and the next clinic. In all, 1,430 Polk County residents were immunized.

"When I got into this, I didn't realize that you'd be up between 4:30 and 5 a.m., eat breakfast and then start getting things together for the day's clinics," said Dr. Fox. "But it's really nice being out in the country."

The team went through thousands of cotton balls and gallons of acetone disinfectant.

They carried with them three jet injector guns — using two at a time, leaving the third for back-up — as well as spare parts for the mechanisms. They toted a styrofoam case filled with vaccine, reams of consent forms and more than a dozen information signs which had been hung and taken down at dozens of clinic sites.

Before the first clinic began in the Shelby High School gym at 9 a.m., 10 area volunteers had been assigned their duties and given their instructions. Two volunteers met people at the door, directing them to the correct line: one for people over 45 who were to receive the bivalent vaccine for both swine flu and A/Victoria and another for those under 45 who were eligible for the monovalent (swine flu only) vaccine.

Another four volunteers sat at two screening tables handing out and accepting consent forms. They routinely asked each person, "Have you read the form? Are you allergic to eggs? Do you have any questions?"

The four remaining volunteers consisted of two uniform-clad registered nurses who swabbed each passing arm with disinfectant, and two community members who applied dry cotton swabs after the vaccine had been administered.

"I didn't wear my overalls today," said one volunteer, Mrs. Rollins Fromberg of Polk. "If I wasn't here, I'd be out driving the truck."

"This gives me a little change, I don't have to look at corn. You need a little more diversion, you know," she added, laughing. "Don't get me wrong, I love looking at corn, but people are a little more interesting."

From consent form to the final cotton ball, the whole "ordeal" took less than two minutes for each person.

But from the size of the crowd in each clinic building, one would think being immunized took a great deal longer.

"You know this is a social event as well as a medical event," Dr. Fox commented.

And for many it was. Long after they'd received their inoculation, people lingered to visit, clustered in groups of family, friends and neighbors.

Far more than half of those being inoculated fell into the over 45 category. In fact, many were well past that age. They came with their children; some were in wheelchairs or using walkers.

And more often than not, the elderly were the first in line. At each clinic site several elderly people were already waiting in line by the time the team arrived.

The Osceola clinic was to open at 1 p.m. But, by 12:55 p.m. — five minutes before the clinic was officially open — 137 people had already received the vaccine.

Yet, in spite of the free vaccine, in spite of the accessibility of the clinics, the overall turnout was only 30% of the Polk County population eligible to receive the vaccine.

"We can't go in and set up in every small town, but in every Nebraska county there is an opportunity for people to go somewhere," said Bill Pack, state immunization coordinator, who helped with the Polk County clinics.

Over a lunch of mainly cheeseburgers and french fries, Pack said, "A lot of people want make-up clinics. They see that their friends have had it (the vaccine) and are okay, so they want to get it now."

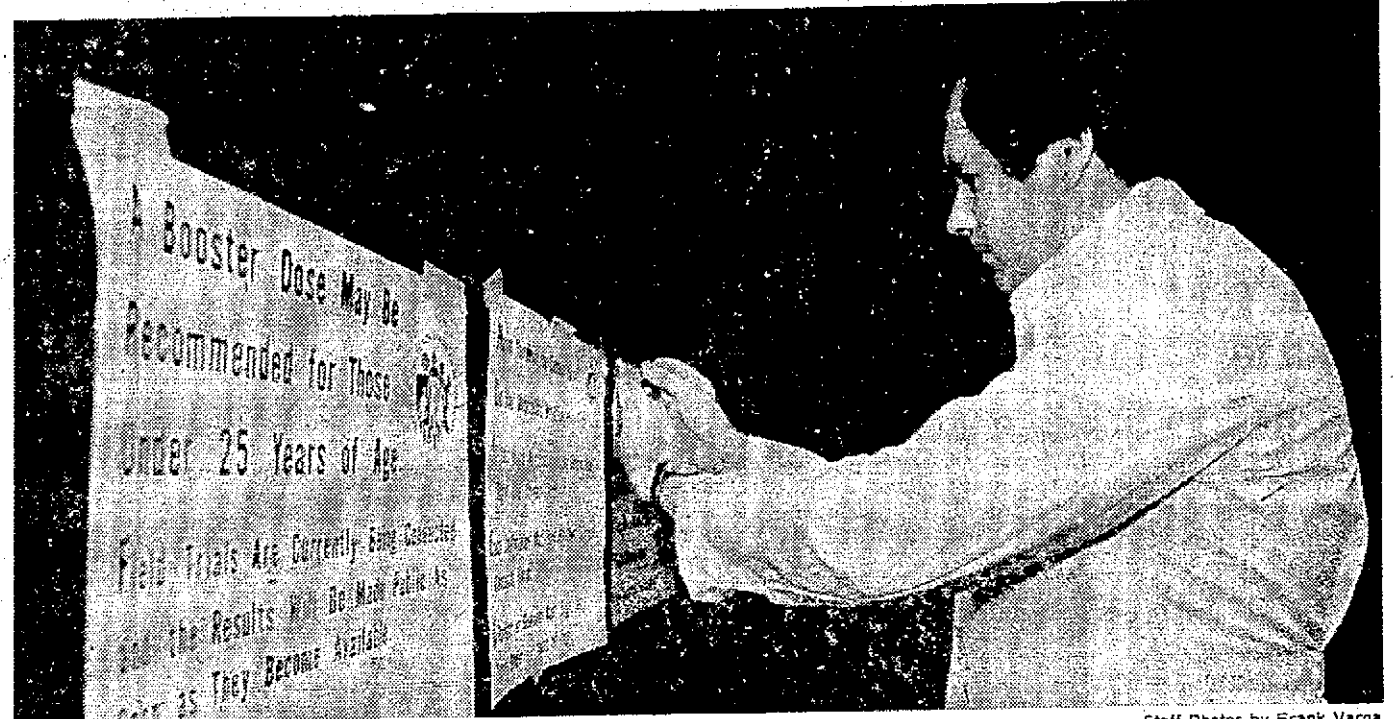

"Or, they ask, 'If swine flu breaks out, will you come back out and give flu shots?' 'It's kind of like the TV commercial. They want Mikey to try it first,'" he said, shaking his head.

But after Nov. 21, all three teams can breathe sighs of relief; all of Nebraska's clinics will have been completed.

Reflecting on the teams' rugged schedules, Dr. Fox laughed and said, "Until it's over, we have to give a two-week notice of death or serious illness."

Jet injector gun, one of team's three, wielded by Dr. Fox.

Dr. Fox and teammates must post signs at every clinic site to keep public informed.

It's too early for Christmas, isn't it?

By Jim Comden

Staff Writer

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas. Not everywhere you go; just in some places. Like some of the department stores.

There was a time when Christmas didn't start until the day after Thanksgiving. But that hardly provided enough time for all the Christmas shopping one is expected to do, so then Christmas began sometime in mid-November.

Now Christmas begins in mid-October, which makes decorating a little tricky. Red and green clash with the orange and black of Halloween. One local department store solved the Halloween-Christmas dilemma by placing Yuletide decorations and lights next to the rubber masks and candy. As shoppers bought up costumes and goodies, the store filled the empty space with plastic trees and candy canes.

The store did, however, miss a good bet by not featuring the Ghost of Christmas Present among their costumes. Maybe next year.

The point of this harangue is that holiday seasons no longer show mercy to those who procrastinate.

If you want nice Christmas cards, order them at least by October; better yet, you should have bought them in January when they were on sale. (I have yet to figure out why the selection of cards is so poor in December but so good in January.)

Christmas, of course, isn't the only season where it doesn't pay to wait till the last minute. Did you ever try to buy a pumpkin on Oct. 29? Or a turkey the Monday before Thanksgiving?

But Christmas, which inspires us to new levels of generosity, charity and joyousness each year, also brings out the true frenzied American character.

Mail packages by Dec. 3, cards by Dec. 10. Pick up your tree at least two weeks before the happy day or you might get stuck with one that is either bare on one side or under two feet tall.

And by all means, do all your Christmas shopping before Dec. 1. Anything after that is considered last-minute buying.

O. Henry once wrote a story, "The Gift of the Magi," in which the heroine sold her hair for a wig on Christmas Eve and bought her husband a watch chain. Today she would have been able to manage, at best, a paisley tie and a pair of shorts.

Rushing the Christmas season has become a predictable American pastime. It probably has finite limits, however, and Christmas may some day follow the bicentennial into oblivion.

But then, who am I to complain? It's really too early to write an article criticizing the commercialism of Christmas.

Be thankful for the favor

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Bridge

Let's say you're in three notrump and West leads the king of clubs. You duck, but when West continues with the queen you take the ace and play a low spade from dummy. East takes the king and shifts to a low diamond. You finesse the queen, which wins, and play the queen of spades on which West discards a diamond.

If you make the mistake of playing a low spade from dummy, you end up going down one. But if you have your eye on the ball, you overtake the queen of spades with ace, concede the ten to East's jack, and wind up making the contract.

Well played, you could say, but the fact is that you owe East a big vote of thanks for helping you make the contract. He should not have rushed up so impulsively with the king of spades when you led the low spade from dummy.

Had he followed low, as he should have, you'd have found it impossible to score nine tricks. Your queen of spades would have won the trick, all right, but you would have made only two spade tricks instead of the four you made after East's obligingly went up with the king.

East should have realized that there was nothing to gain by rising with the king — and a great deal to lose. There was no spade holding declarer could have that would justify going up with the king, and there were several spade holdings he could have where the king play would prove fatal.

So, while it's true that you made the contract by virtue of your flawless play, it is also true that you were handsomely assisted in the project by East.

Tragedy overtakes coal field mother

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have raised 14 children, eight daughters and six sons, here in the coal fields of the Southeast. All were raised in the church. (My husband teaches a Bible class.)

Seven years ago one of my daughters, then 15, became pregnant. I couldn't believe it and was heartbroken. My husband insisted that she be sent away, and her baby left wherever it was born. I defied him, saw my daughter through the birth and am now raising her little boy. My once tenderhearted, precious daughter has become a lesbian and has fallen into the use of alcohol and drugs.

Six weeks ago she revealed to me that her own father is the baby's father, too! I also learned that he had molested our other daughters as they were growing up. No one would tell me, but immediately after high school graduation they would leave home to work. Now I know why!

For the first time in my life, prayer has not brought me the wisdom I need now. I am 58, a diabetic, ailing physically and longing for peace of mind. My 60-year-old husband repels me. Would you leave him or endure till death separates you? Please help me.

CRUSHED: If ever a mother of 14 children deserved their understanding and help, you do. They can help make life bearable again. Go to them.

Your husband is a very sick man, and unless he goes for treatment and recovers completely (which I doubt he will), the Lord will forgive you for not being a wife to him.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is an ordained minister who doesn't charge a fee to officiate at weddings for families in his congregation.

Last summer he performed six ceremonies. They were all lovely church affairs followed by receptions and dinners, and the night before, there were rehearsal dinners. Abby, my husband and I never got one invitation to any of these festivities!

One bride's mother said to my husband after the ceremony, "Oh, please stay for the reception and dinner, and phone your wife and tell her to come over right away?" (He politely declined.)

Another bride told him, "We didn't invite you and your wife to our wedding reception because we figured you'd be too busy to come."

The other four brides didn't even ask my husband to stay after the ceremony, but one saw him on the street a few months later and said, "How come you didn't stay for the dinner? We had a place set for you!"

My husband's brother is a minister in Illinois, and he and his wife are invited to all the affairs related to the wedding. And he is paid a fee, too. What's the matter with the people in California, Abby?

DEAR ABBY: Three years ago I married a widower who had two daughters. This is my first marriage.

Beginning with Easter, then Mother's Day, then Memorial Day, then her birthday, followed by the anniversary of her death and ending with HER wedding anniversary, the two married daughters make a regular pilgrimage to the cemetery to visit their mother's grave.

I don't mind this, but I do mind the pressure they put on their father to go with them. On some of these occasions, I have accompanied him, but I feel as he does, that Mass and Communion are much more meaningful and not nearly as ostentatious. Don't misunderstand, I have not complained once, and never will, but I think six trips in five weeks to lay plastic flowers on the grave is overdoing it.

How should I handle it? My husband's daughters didn't make all these trips to their mother's grave before their father married me.

IRRITATED: DEAR IRRITATED: Continue to handle it as you have. Say nothing.

Stocks stage late rally

New York (AP) — The stock market staged a late rally Monday, apparently liking what it heard from President-elect Jimmy Carter's late-afternoon press conference.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, which had fallen 38.38 points in the first eight sessions since Election Day, rebounded 7.73 to 935.42.

Gainers outpaced losers by better than a 3-2 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Dow showed a plus-1 reading heading into the last hour as news reports began to reach Wall Street from Carter's meeting with reporters in Plains, G.

The President-elect said he didn't feel wage and price controls would be needed barring a "national catastrophe."

Dow Ind. +7.73

He also said he expected Arthur Burns to continue as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and announced plans to meet with Burns, business leaders and others to discuss the economy.

Brokers noted some reassurance among traders who have been edgy over speculation that Carter might eventually put wage and price controls into effect.

They also said investors saw indications that Carter's other remarks that he saw merit in the emphasis Burns and many Wall Streeters have been putting on the need to curb inflationary pressures.

"He didn't say anything different than he did in the campaign," observed Larry Wachtel at Bache Bache Stuart. "But maybe investors were waiting for some signals from him that might be considered conciliatory."

Chrysler topped the active list, picking up nearly a point for the second straight session. On Friday the Army chose the company to develop an advanced battle tank.

Sprague Electric, the second most active issue, shot up nearly 7 points after General Cable revealed a $19.50-a-share tender offer for all of Sprague's stock.

UAL advanced a fraction in active trading. The company's United Airlines subsidiary chalked up a sharp gain in October earnings.

Lower-priced housing stocks dotted the list of percentage gainers, among them Kaufman & Broad, U.S. Home and Alpha Portland Industries.

OSU, Oklahoma hold key to Husker trip to Miami

By Virgil Parker
Sports Editor

Just one set of circumstances will put Nebraska in the Orange Bowl in Miami New Year's night. Oklahoma State must beat Iowa State this Saturday and the Cornhuskers must defeat Oklahoma Nov. 26.

If you think that reduces the chances for the Cornhuskers of receiving an invitation to Miami, consider the plight of defending national and Orange Bowl champion Oklahoma.

The Sooners can only be in the running for the Miami bowl bid if Colorado should lose to winless Kansas this Saturday.

Colorado, with a victory over K-State, will be in the best position for the Miami bid.

That news came late Monday morning when the Orange Bowl committee informed the Big Eight Conference that it has arrived at a formula which it will utilize in selecting a Big Eight team in case of a tie for the conference championship.

If there is a two-way tie, the team that defeated the other co-champion during the regular-season competition will get the berth automatically.

Barring tie games in the closing round of league action, the only chance for a two-way tie would be if Colorado lost to Kansas State in its final game.

That would leave the Oklahoma State-Iowa State and Nebraska-Oklahoma winners deadlocked. Nebraska topped OSU, but lost to Iowa State. Oklahoma beat ISU, but lost to Oklahoma State.

The Orange Bowl committee announced that there be a three-way tie for the title and if one team has beaten the other two during the regular campaign, that team will receive the invitation. However, if there is no advantage (i.e., if each team has one victory and one loss against the other two contenders), the squad with the best overall season record as of games through Nov. 27 will go to the New Year's extravaganza.

Since Colorado must be considered a near cinch to join such a threesome, the following combinations could exist following the Oklahoma State-Iowa State and Nebraska-Oklahoma games:

—Colorado, Iowa State, Nebraska: A round-robin result. Each beat one of the others. Iowa State would go to Miami with the best overall record, 9-2 on the year.

—Colorado, Iowa State, Oklahoma: Colorado would go, having beaten both of the other two.

—Colorado, Oklahoma State, Nebraska: Nebraska would go, having beaten both of the other two.

—Colorado, Oklahoma State, Oklahoma: Colorado would go, having beaten both of the other two.

The plan could immediately clear Oklahoma and Nebraska for the acceptance of some other bowl bid this Saturday.

If Colorado beats Kansas State, as expected, Oklahoma is without a chance at the Orange Bowl and will be free to accept another invitation.

The same is true for Nebraska should Iowa State top Oklahoma State this Saturday in Stillwater.

Colorado fans are down to rooting for just one team — Oklahoma over Nebraska. If that should happen, regardless of the outcome of the Oklahoma State-Iowa State game, the Buffs will get the Miami invitation.

The explanations of the formula ignores two possibilities — tie games and the remote chance that Oklahoma State, should the Cowboys beat Iowa State this Saturday, might lose a season-ending game to Texas El Paso, a team currently sporting a lowly 1-9 record.

The Orange Bowl committee appears to have arrived at a fair and equitable solution to this complex situation. Big Eight commissioner Chuck Neinas says. "By using this formula, the representative to the Orange bowl will appropriately be decided on the football field rather than in committee."

"You people created quite a problem for us," Orange Bowl selection committee chairman Bob Lafferty says. "But we're resolving the problem. We will come up with some kind of a formula — a program which will let everybody know where they stand."

Post-season bowl people are allowed, under NCAA rules, to tender an invitation after this Saturday's games.

The Orange Bowl people, Lafferty says, don't want a Big Eight team to turn down another bowl bid while waiting for an Orange Bowl decision, then find themselves shut out.

"We feel morally committed to let everyone know our thinking and to get that decision to Big Eight commissioner Chuck Neinas," Lafferty said.

"A three-way tie seems quite likely," Lafferty added. "The Nebraska-Oklahoma winner, the Iowa State-Oklahoma State winner and Colorado, should they get by Kansas State as expected, would each have two losses."

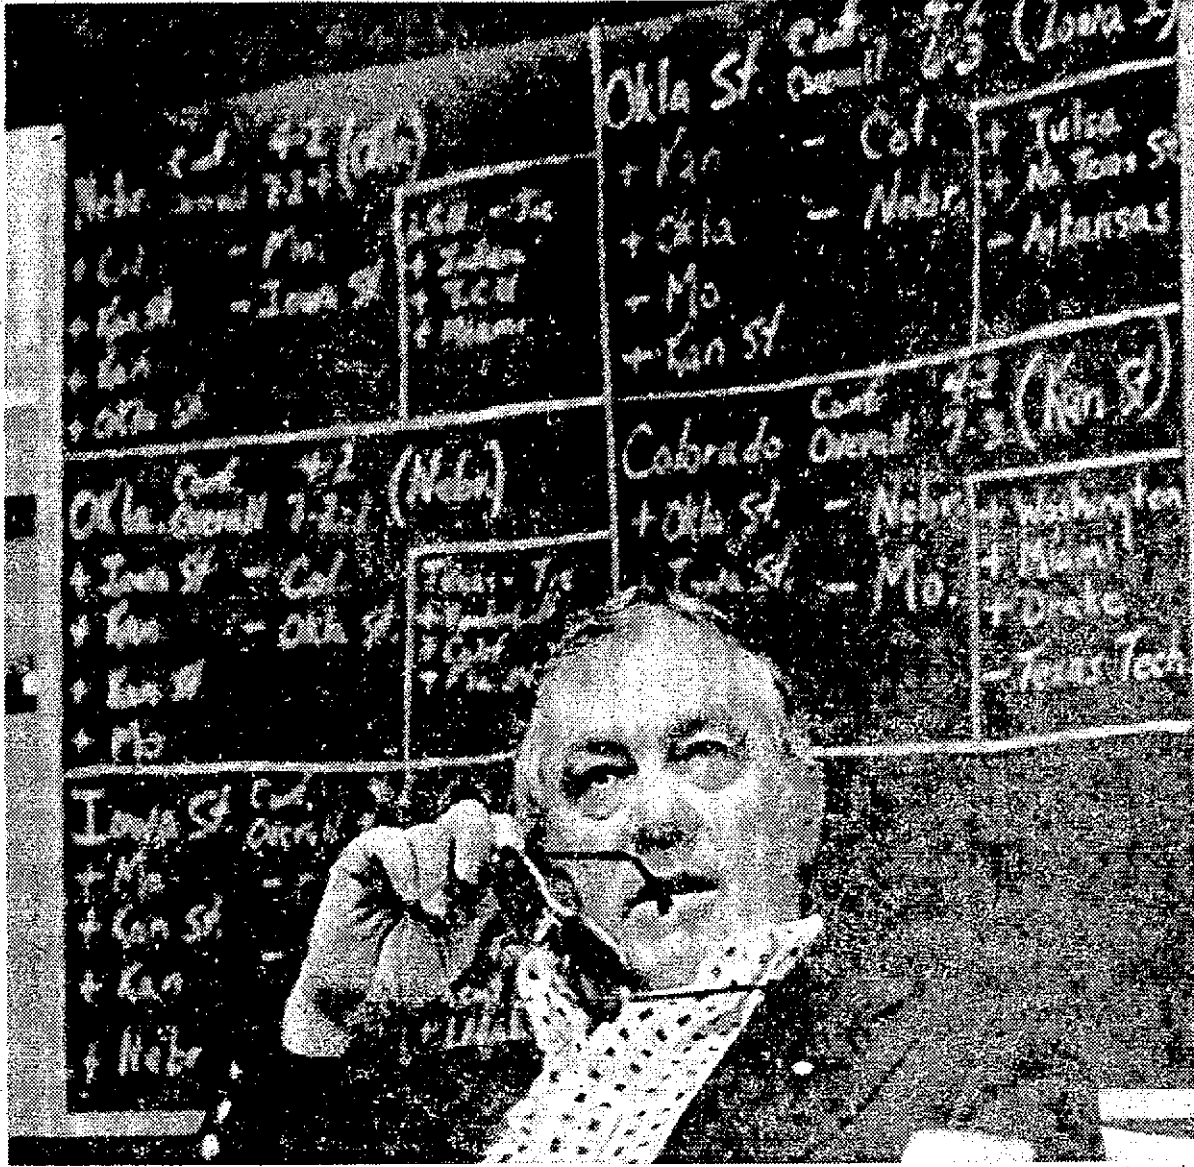

The league co-champions who do not go to the Orange Bowl will be prime candidates for other post season games.

Last year the Fiesta Bowl waited a week beyond the date allowed for offering berths and wound up with nationally ranked Nebraska as an opponent for its WAC Conference champ.

Indications are that others, such as the Gator, Bluebonnet, and Liberty may play a waiting game this year.

The formula, presented to Neinas Monday morning by Orange Bowl president Gene Autrey and selection committee chairmen Nick Crane, will apply to this year only. Such decisions are made on a year-by-year basis.

The Orange Bowl and the Big Eight are in the second year of a four-year contract whereby the conference champion automatically qualifies for the Miami post-game classic.

Nick Crane is shown with the formula which will decide the Big Eight representative.

Osborne cites 'hitter theory' as reason for loss

By Dave Sittler
Staff Sports Writer

There's an unwritten rule in college football which subscribes to the theory: hit or get hit. It's a simple philosophy, but it goes a long way toward winning or losing.

Speaking at the weekly meeting of the Extra Point Club luncheon Monday afternoon, Nebraska coach Tom Osborne pointed out that his team did not follow the hitting theory at all in the Huskers' shocking 37-28 loss to Iowa State last Saturday.

Nebraska served as the "hittee" instead of the "hitter" against the Cyclones in the contest which cost Nebraska sole ownership of the Big Eight Conference lead and threw the league battle into a five-way tie.

"We were just not ready to hit people," Osborne said. "Although Iowa State had talented people at the skilled positions, we felt up front we had better people. We felt we could control the line of scrimmage and we would win. But that is exactly what we didn't do."

Defensive coordinator Monte Kiffin opened the meeting and had the theme of hitting on his mind, also.

"We couldn't have stopped Slippery Rock," Kiffin said of Nebraska's effort against Iowa State. "Any of you people who went to the game should demand to get your money back."

"But if you come to practice this week," Kiffin continued, "I'll guarantee you, you'll get your money's worth because we are going to do some hitting."

Calling the loss the "most disappointing in my career as a head coach," Osborne said "we had a good attitude all week. Our practices were not great, but they were all right. But we were not mentally sharp."

The Cornhusker coach did admit the rugged schedule Nebraska has faced thus far while building a 7-2-1 mark might have been a factor in the loss.

"I can't remember a season since I've been here that has been as hard hitting week after week," Osborne said. "Maybe our well (on emotions) just ran dry."

Osborne said the defeat could have been blamed on several reasons, including: the crowd noise that hindered the Cornhuskers from audibling, injuries to key defensive players, turnovers and a couple of calls by the officials.

But, despite all those reasons, Osborne said, "We just got beat. We didn't play well enough to win. But we still had a chance to win even though we were not playing well."

"Iowa State has a good football team," he continued. "We felt they have the best people in the skill positions as any team we've faced this year."

Both Nebraska coaches had praise for the Huskers' next foe, Oklahoma on Nov. 26 in Lincoln.

"Oklahoma is really rolling now," Kiffin said. "Lott (quarterback Thomas) runs the wishbone as well as Steve Davis and we did not exactly stop Steve Davis."

"Don't give up on us," Kiffin told the crowd. "We are not going to give up on the kids. Oklahoma better have their chin straps buttoned on when they come up here."

Tempering Kiffin's warning to the Sooners by saying Kiffin meant it would be cold so Oklahoma would want to keep warm by cinching up their chin straps, Osborne said, we committed a cardinal sin against Iowa State by not controlling the line of scrimmage and by not hitting people. That won't be the case against Oklahoma.

"We are going to go back to basics and work on blocking and tackling," Osborne said. "I can't promise a win over Oklahoma, but I can promise you we will give our best effort."

Osborne gave the Huskers Monday off and then scheduled a light workout Tuesday before the opening pads Wednesday.

"I was a little down before I came down here and heard Monte speak," Osborne joked of Kiffin's fiery oration. "Maybe Monte and I will put on the pads and get fired up."

Osborne said he expected his entire squad to be at peak physical condition against the Sooners, noting the extra time off between the Iowa State and Oklahoma games will help heal a lot of physical and mental injuries.

"They (Nebraska) are pretty tired right now," Osborne said. "They need rest more than anything at the moment."

UCLA closing on Pitt lead; NU slips to 11th

New York (UPI) — UCLA, with its most crucial game of the season only five days away, has launched a late but significant bid to overhaul Pittsburgh as the United Press International board of coaches' top-ranked college football team.

The Panthers, with 22 first place votes and 389 overall points, retained the No. 1 ranking they achieved a week ago, but UCLA, a distant second last week, pulled to within nine points of the No. 1 slot Monday in the latest balloting of the 42-member coaches' panel.

The biggest inroad by the Bruins was made in first place votes where they increased their total from eight to 15. Pittsburgh, meanwhile, dropped eight No. 1 nods from a week ago. The UCLA surge was obviously triggered by the Bruins' decisive (45-14) victory over Oregon State Saturday while Pittsburgh was struggling (24-16) with arch-rival West Virginia.

Southern California, with 303 points and one first place vote, remained No. 3 in the nation, thus adding to the dramatics of next Saturday's Rose Bowl and ratings showdown between the two rival Los Angeles schools. A victory by UCLA (9-0-1) would certainly enhance the Bruins' chances of catching Pittsburgh, which still has Penn State remaining on its schedule. Southern California, with one loss, would definitely have to couple a victory over UCLA with a Pittsburgh defeat from Penn State on Nov. 26 if the Trojans were to climb to the first spot over the still unbeaten and untied Panthers. Judging by UCLA's renewed support, however, many of the coaches seem inclined to softpeddle the Bruins' early season tie with Ohio State at Columbus.

The top eight teams remained unchanged from a week ago. After the top three, Michigan (with three first place votes), Texas Tech, Georgia, Maryland and Ohio State kept their positions from fourth through eighth. Oklahoma replaced Nebraska at No. 9 and Iowa State, which shocked the Cornhuskers (37-28) last week, moved into the No. 10 spot—an improvement of six notches.

Nebraska headed the second 10, followed in order by Texas A&M, Houston, Notre Dame, Tulsa, Colorado and Oklahoma State. Then at No. 11, unbeaten and untied Rutgers, which has been championed for top 20 recognition by its New Jersey faithful with each succeeding victory.

Western Athletic Conference

co-leaders Brigham Young and Wyoming tied for the No. 19 spot.

Pittsburgh-Georgia set for Sugar Bowl?

From News Wires

It looks like No. 1 Pitt might meet Georgia in the Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day in New Orleans.

And selection committees from other major and minor bowls are busy trying to make the best pairings available.

The top-rated Panthers have a team meeting Tuesday, and they could vote then on which bowl they prefer. A source close to the team said the obvious choice is the Sugar Bowl, where Pitt would meet Georgia, the Southeastern Conference champion which has a 9-1 record.

Georgia, automatically in the Sugar as the SEC representative, is favored to win its last game of the season — Georgia Tech on Nov. 27. Pitt still faces Penn State Nov. 26.

The rules prevent Sugar officials from officially inviting Pitt until Saturday. However, the team can vote earlier and decide what they would do if they got the invitation.

And there is little doubt they will get a Sugar invitation, if they want it.

The New Orleans States-Item reported Monday that Pitt would indeed vote on Tuesday, and said the vote would be to go to the Sugar Bowl so Pitt Coach Johnny Majors can go against a high-rated opponent.

Georgia was No. 7 in last week's ratings and should finish higher if it beats Georgia Tech.

"The Sugar's chances took a big leap Saturday when Nebraska was beaten by Iowa State," a Pitt source was quoted as telling the States-Item. "It means the Orange Bowl host might be out of the top 10 in the final regular-season ratings."

Nebraska's 37-28 defeat left the Big Eight Conference championship in a five-way tie. Which one will go to the Orange Bowl will be decided by the selection committee, but any one of the five will probably have a lower ranking than Georgia.

"Majors feels he can better prepare his team for an opponent with a higher ranking," the States-Item's source said.

Pitt's Tony Dorsett, top-heavy favorite to win the Heisman Trophy, said after Saturday's victory over West Virginia, "I think the kids would rather go to New Orleans to play a 10-1 team than to Dallas (the Cotton Bowl) to play an 11-0 team."

Fifth-ranked Texas Tech is 80, with three games to go. Saturday they meet 12th ranked Houston which was idle last week, then Arkansas and Baylor after that.

If Pitt defeats Penn State, it could give the Sugar its second No. 1 team in three years. Alabama lost to No. 2 Notre Dame two years ago.

The game, back on New Year's Day after four years on New Year's Eve, will be in the Superdome, game time 11:30 a.m.

Orange Bowl directors, tied to the Big Eight for one of their teams, are busy trying to line up an opponent.

Pittsburgh is in the running and could probably have the bid, if it wants it. If not, their leading teams in the race include unbeaten Maryland, Notre Dame and the runners-up in the Big Ten and Pacific-8 conferences.

"We think we still have an excellent opportunity to get Pittsburgh," said Nick Crane, selections boss for the Orange Bowl.

"Well wait until after Saturday's games before we decide who to invite," he said. "There's a lot of sentiment for Maryland on the committee and all of a sudden there's a lot of sentiment for Southern Cal or UCLA."

Five Big Eight teams head a list of 13 possible selections for the Gator Bowl Dec. 27.

Big Eight teams in the running are Nebraska, Iowa State, Oklahoma, Colorado and Oklahoma State. Other teams are Alabama, Texas A&M, Maryland, Florida, North Carolina, Southern California, Michigan and Penn State.

Deer opener successful in Nebraska

Nebraska's nine day firearm deer season opened Saturday, and according to Ken Johnson, chief of Game Management for the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, the opener was a fairly good one.

Reports from district areas include:

Panhandle — Check stations in Alliance and Chadron reported similar success as hunters had last year. Karl Menzel, district supervisor for game management from Bassett, reported a slight reduction in success at his station near Crawford, but he felt the cold temperatures on Saturday may have affected some hunters. Conservation officers checking hunters in the upper plateau unit reported light hunting pressure but quite a few hunters reported seeing plenty of deer. Near Garfield, hunters were having difficulty finding deer because of standing corn in the area and generally dry conditions.

Sandhills — Ken Robertson, check station operator at Bassett reported hunting success very close to last year in the Kaya Paha unit, and most of the animals taken were yearlings. Hunters in the Calamus and Calamus West units were doing reasonably well as were hunters in the Sandhills unit. Some hunters reported seeing more hunters than deer in the National Forest lands near Halsey, but those on private land in the unit were doing well.

Southwest — Operators of the North Platte check station reported that the results of the first two days was close to that of last year. In addition, they reported good numbers of trophy age class animals, being taken. Stations near McCook and Lexington also reported success similar to last year, while the check station at Ft. Kearney reported that success was down slightly from last year. In Ogallala, a power outage reduced Saturday morning's kill somewhat, but hunters were generally doing well.

Northeast — Bob Havel, operator of the check station near Norfolk, said the opening weekend was comparable with last year's despite some reports of dead deer in his area. Lee Rupp, check station operator near Columbus, reported success was down nearly 20% from last year's effort although conditions were ideal for hunting. He had many reports of dead deer, presumably from EHD.

Southeast — In the Blue unit, hunters were doing well in Pawnee, Richardson and Nemaha counties with success similar to that of last year. In Gage and Jefferson counties, hunters were having some trouble finding deer and hunting pressure was down. Near Grand Island, conditions were good, however, pressure was light and few deer were taken. In the Geneva area, hunters were having trouble finding deer and few were being taken.

Unhappy Anthony Davis buys own contract

Toronto (AP) — Anthony Davis, the Toronto Argonauts' controversial $1 million running back, has purchased his contract from the Canadian Football League team with an eye toward joining the National Football League.

Argos owner Bill Hodgson announced late Monday that the former University of Southern California star had purchased his outright release from the club. Davis, 24, had completed only the first of a five-year contract with the Argos which was reported to be worth $1 million.

Anthony Davis
... Eyes NFL

Reasons for his departure were not elaborated on, but Mike Trope, Davis' agent, indicated Davis wants to return to the United States so he could be close to a possible acting career and have an opportunity to play in the NFL.

Dick Shatto, Argos managing director, said: "Anthony and the Argonauts are parting on amiable terms."

"A. D. is a great athlete," he said, "but if you have someone in your organization who is not completely happy, then it's best for both parties that he have the opportunity to try his skills elsewhere."

"Argos management acted as gentlemen," Trope, said from his California office. "We wanted to part on friendly terms, with the firm understanding that A. D. acted likewise as a gentleman by purchasing his release."

"He likes Canadian people, the city of Toronto and the CFL, but felt that a return to the NFL would be in the best interest of his over-all career."

Hodgson, Davis and Trope signed the necessary papers to free Davis from his contract. In return for the release, Toronto received an undisclosed cash settlement.

The Argonauts placed Davis on CFL waivers last week. When the other eight teams showed no desire to pick up his huge contract, he became a free agent.

The announcement opened the door for Davis to resume his football career next season in the NFL with the Tampa Bay Buccaneers. He had been drafted by the New York Jets, the team Toronto outbid for his services a year ago.

Staubach passes Cowboys to victory over Buffalo

Dallas (AP) — Dallas blinded Buffalo with a 61-yard touchdown blitz in 13 seconds late in the first half on the magic of two Roger Staubach-to-Drew Pearson passes Monday night and the Cowboys tripped the battling Bills 17-10 in a National Football League game.

The victory gave Dallas a 9-1 record, the best start in the 16-year history of the club, and restored its one-game lead over St. Louis in the National Conference East.

The sputtering Cowboys flickered to life midway in the second period of the nationally televised game on a two-yard touchdown run by Preston Pearson.

Buffalo jumped right back, thanks to a costly mistake by rookie Butch Johnson, who touched a crazily bouncing punt. Dan Jilek recovered on the Dallas 42-yard line.

Quarterback Gary Marangi tied it 7-7 three plays later with a 27-yard scoring strike to tight end Reuben Gant, who broke two tackles.

Dallas took over on its 39 with only 25 seconds on the clock. But instead of running the time out, Staubach found Drew Pearson over the middle on a 40-yard play that carried to the Buffalo 21.

On the next play, Staubach found Pearson again, this time floating behind safety Doug Jones on the left sideline, and connected for the tie-breaking touchdown with only 13 seconds left in the half.

Novak hurt seriously

Tom Novak, a Nebraska football standout in the late 1940s, was seriously injured in an accident at his brother's home in Omaha last Friday night.

Novak's son, Terry, a member of the Cornhusker basketball team, reports that his father slipped and fell down a flight of stairs.

"In addition to a bad cut on the back of his head, which required numerous stitches," young Novak said, "he suffered a badly bruised spine."

5 drug arrests culminate year-long investigation

By Lynn Zerschling
Star Staff Writer

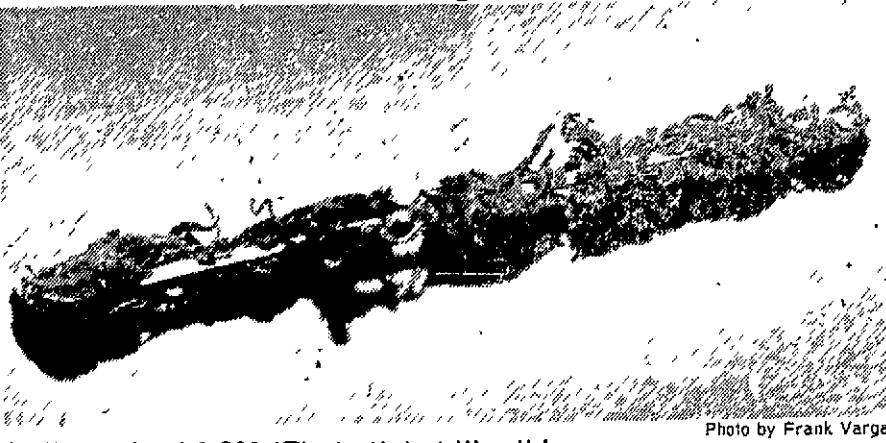

Four men and one woman were arraigned in Lancaster County Court Monday on drug charges culminating a year-long investigation.

Lincoln police arrested John F. Aden, 28, and James E. Adams, 31, near 10th and H St. Sunday night and seized cocaine, barbituates, marijuana and LSD. The estimated street value of those drugs is between $50,000 and $70,000, Police Lt. Al Maxey said.

Randall Hunt, 34, Delano Coufal, 30, and Rebecca Peters, 32, were arrested a short time later. The value of drugs confiscated at their homes has not been calculated, Maxey said.

The arrests resulted from a lengthy investigation by Lincoln police, the Nebraska State Patrol and the Lancaster County sheriff's office.

Aden, who didn't list an address, was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver, possession of cocaine with intent to deliver and conspiring with Coufal to deliver marijuana. Each offense is a felony.

Police seized 1,300 'Thai sticks' like this.

Adams, from Aspen, Colo., was charged with possession of LSD, a felony.

Hunt, of 701 Calvert, was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver.

Coufal, of 1926 Sumner, was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver and conspiring with Aden to deliver marijuana.

Ms. Peters, of 1926 Sumner, was charged with possession of marijuana with intent to deliver.

Maxey said police stopped a pickup truck with Aden and Adams Sunday night. In addition to finding cocaine and LSD, police found about 1,300 "Thai sticks" of marijuana.

Maxey described a Thai stick as being six inches long by one-half inch wide, consisting of marijuana tightly wrapped around a stick. Each costs between $25 and $40.

Aden and Adams also allegedly were carrying $7,400 in cash, which police said shows the pair are drug dealers.

After arresting the pair, police obtained search warrants and arrested Hunt at his house at 701 Calvert and arrested Ms. Peters and Coufal at their house at 1926 Sumner, Maxey said. The three had in their possession smaller amounts of drugs, police said.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront fixed Aden's bond at $7,000. Bond for Adams was set at $2,000. Cheuvront fixed bond for Coufal at $3,000, for Ms. Peters at $1,500 and for Hunt at $1,500.

A preliminary hearing date for the five will be set Nov. 30.

N. Lincoln annexation argued again

The proposed annexation of 370 acres of land in north Lincoln received another public hearing Monday before the city council.

As they did several months ago, attorneys for the landowners involved opposed the annexation.

The proposal went down to defeat the first time, but has returned to the council after the issue was referred to the City-County Planning Commission, which recommended approval of the annexation.

In other business Monday, the council took the following actions:

- Delayed hearing until Nov. 22 on the request of the NBC Co. for a Class C liquor license on the 11th floor of the NBC building and application of James Stuart as manager.
- Delayed until Nov. 22 hearing on request of Lincoln Airport Plaza for retail package liquor license at 2925 N.W. 12th and application of Richard Shoemaker as manager.
- Defeated amendment to special permit for Bishop Square regarding alterations to patios.
- Approved claims against city for October.
- Delayed action one week on application of Kingerly Construction for use of public space for steel siding on former Cengas building at 1200 N.

- Denied request for special permit to permit four-plex at 4620 Eden Circle.
- Approved request by Adams Ltd. to build parking lot at 3035 N. 70th.
- Delayed one week action on final plat of Skyline Highlands Add. replat west of S. 14th and one-fourth mile south of Old Cheney Rd.

W. Lincolinites request another round on park

The City Council has been asked to change its mind on its decision last week to drop plans for a park in West Lincoln.

Chairman Max Denney said he will bring the issue up at the council's Dec. 6 meeting.

The council last week dropped the park plans because of the opposition of some area residents.

But Denney told reporters that supporters of the park claimed they failed to appear before the council because they were told by city officials that creation of the park was in the bag.

Five Old West governors urge Carter appoint Guy to cabinet

Bismarck, N.D. (AP) — The five governors of the Old West Regional Commission said Monday they would urge President-elect Jimmy Carter to appoint former North Dakota Gov. William Guy to his cabinet.

In a letter to Carter, the governors urged the President-elect to consider Guy wither for secretary of agriculture or secretary of interior.

Gov. Arthur A. Link of North Dakota said he had secured the support of the four other Old West Regional Commission governors in supporting Guy for a cabinet post.

Signing the letter along with Link were Gov. Ed Herschler of Wyoming, Gov. James Exon of Nebraska, Gov. Thomas Judge of Montana and South Dakota Gov. Richard Kneip.

Guy currently serves as director of the Western Governors Regional Energy Policy Office at Denver, Colo., and served as governor of North Dakota from 1960 to 1972.

In their letter to Carter, the governors said Guy's "personal knowledge of agriculture, his legislative experience followed by 12 years as governor, plus two years of working for the 10 western governors' Regional Energy Policy Office" represented an outstanding record of public service.

"Under his chairmanship of the National Governors Conference, new policies were initiated that improved its effectiveness," the governors said. The five state chief executives told Carter Guy was "highly qualified" to fill either the secretary of agriculture or secretary of interior position.

"Bill Guy is knowledgeable, competent, energetic and absolutely honest," the governors said. "He would bring credit to the new Carter administration."

Ex-Penal Complex guard charged with smuggling

A former guard at the Nebraska Penal Complex was arraigned in Lancaster County Court Monday with smuggling in contraband material to inmates.

Roger McNeil, 26, of Uteca, is charged with providing movies and magazines to penitentiary inmates on Nov. 11, a felony offense.

Deputy County Atty. Steve Yungblut described the movies and magazines as being sexually explicit. McNeil was a guard at the Penal Complex at the time he allegedly supplied inmates with the materials.

County Judge Jeffre Cheuvront fixed bond at $1,000 and said a preliminary hearing date will be set Nov. 30.

Clarks farmer wins $275,000 in damage suit

Central City (AP) — Harold Herman of Clarks was awarded $275,000 Monday in a U.S. District Court suit against Midland Ag Services Inc. of Clarks.

Herman, a farmer, testified that he was transferring anhydrous ammonia from a bulk tank to the applicator in June, 1974, when a valve apparently malfunctioned, causing ammonia to spray in his face.

As a result of the accident, Herman lost sight in his left eye and suffered a vision impairment in his right eye.

In the suit, Herman charged Midland Ag Services with negligence and furnishing defective equipment.

Darlene Miller, clerk of the district court, said it was the first jury trial in Merrick County in six years. She said the settlement probably was the largest ever awarded in the 21st Judicial District.

Zinnemann film 'Julia' movie about two women

Paris (AP) — "Movies in recent years have featured all kinds of close relationships between men. I think it's time for a film about two women."

Film maker Fred Zinnemann was talking about the project that has brought him back to production after a four-year absence; his last was "Day of the Jackal." His new subject is "Julia," based on a chapter of Lillian Hellman's book "Pentimento." Jane Fonda is playing the young Hellman, Vanessa Redgrave is Julia, her childhood friend who becomes enmeshed in the anti-Nazi movement in pre-war Germany.

After shooting the 20th Century-Fox film in England, Zinnemann had come to Paris for scenes around the city and at the Bologne studios, then planned to finish at Strasbourg. "I'm half-way through the picture and it feels good," said the double Oscar winner ("From Here to Eternity," "A Man for All Seasons"). A vigorous 69, he stood bare-headed in a misty chill, directing a scene near the Louvre in the Tuilleries with Maximilian Schell and Miss Fonda.

Zinnemann said that the project had come to him through producer Richard Roth, who had commissioned a first-draft screenplay by Alvin Sargent. The director described it as the story of "a friendship of two girls who are school chums and then drift apart; Julia becomes enmeshed in the intellectual ferment of Berlin, and Lillian brings money to provide escape for people in danger — not only Jews but liberals who oppose Hitler."

An important figure in "Julia" is Dashiell Hammett, with whom Miss Hellman lived for many years. "I'm portraying him as a father figure, since he was older than Lillian," said Zinnemann. Jason Robards is Hammett.

The relationship between Julia and Lillian? "It is totally platonic," said the director.

"Anyone who goes to the picture looking for kicks will be terribly disappointed."

Although she regretted missing the excitement of the American election, Jane Fonda seemed totally absorbed in "Julia."

"I can't tell you how exciting it is to be doing a story about the internal dynamics of two women who really care for each other," said the actress. "It is a rare script that deals with intellectual growth. There is no game-playing, no neurosis, no sense of women competing with each other. If nothing else, 'Julia' will present a positive image for women."

Like "Kluge," the film that won her the 1971 Academy award as best actress, "Julia" can be viewed on two levels, she added. The more obvious level is the melodrama of running money to save the lives of those in jeopardy. Then there is the added factor of the inner lives of two women.

"How wonderful it is to see the face of a woman who is radiant and glowing because her mind has been introduced to Darwin, Hegel and Einstein," said Miss Fonda. "That is what comes across on the screen with Vanessa Redgrave. She is unlike any actress I have ever seen before, the kind like Eleanor Duse and Kim Stanley that comes only once in a generation."

"Vanessa is constantly surprising. She plays the leader of the two women, and Lillian is very much the follower. They are the same age, but Julia is years ahead intellectually."

Julia, she said, is the pseudonym for a real-life daughter of a rich American family which turned its back on the girl after her adventures abroad. Miss Fonda learned the facts of the story during a two-day visit to Miss Hellman before starting the film.

"I learned a great deal about Lillian — her ill temper, her haughtiness, her feistiness, her irascibility, her sensuality," said the actress.

Three more TV series bite the dust

Los Angeles (AP) — Three more weekly television shows officially were dropped Monday — NBC's "Wednesday Movie" and CBS' "The Blue Knight" and "Tony Orlando and Dawn Rainbow Hour."

It brought to nine the number of programs cancelled by the networks since the new season began in September.

NBC said its Wednesday series of made-for-TV movies will end Nov. 24. The network said three new half-hour situation comedies will be put in its Wednesday night schedule, starting Dec. 1.

The shows are "CPO Sharkey," starring Don Rickles as a chief petty officer at a Navy training center in San Diego; "The MacLean Stevenson Show," with Stevenson as a small-town hardware store owner, and "Sirota's Court," with Michael Constantine playing a night court judge.

NBC also said "The Practice," a Danny Thomas situation comedy will be moved from its 7 p.m. CST Wednesday starting time to 8:20 p.m. CST on Dec. 1.

CBS said its "Tony Orlando" show, now in its third season, will have its last showing on Dec. 28. Its replacement hasn't been announced yet.

CBS said no final air date has been set yet for "The Blue Knight."
